Imitating Birds
How to Make Money

THE CURTISS AND WRIGHT AIRPLANE COMPANIES unite with some others in a $70,000,000 merger.

This air combination, next in size to the National City Bank's "United Aircraft," organized by Charles Mitchell, seeks to divide the field of flying with the big bank's company.

There will, however, be plenty of chance for the little man.

An air line is not like a railroad line. The air is open. Roadbed costs nothing. There can be no monopoly of terminals or of air rights without the connivance of government, which the people would not tolerate.

Above all, there can be no monopoly of ideas. The flying machine of today is far from perfection. It is merely an imitation of a bird. Science does not imitate. It originates.

The United States has ordered the construction of a plane which is one great wing, no body, all power in the wing itself.

A bird requires a body, to eat, think, lay eggs and perpetuate its species.

But it is not necessary to imitate the bird's body in a flying machine, any more than it was necessary to put "dash boards" on the first automobiles, as many manufacturers did.

A little man, with a big idea, might make more out of flying than the two big flying companies combined.

There are various ways of making money.

For instance, Henry Ford bought a little railroad, called "a junk road" by railroad men.

He paid about $1,000,000 for it, and made it earn $1,000,000 a year.

How did he do it? By squeezing down wages economizing on the road? No. He inaugurated high wages among his men, gave them a chance to buy certificates that have been worth more than 13 per cent annually. He made other railroads hate him, and fight him, but that didn't worry him.

Ford is now selling his road to the Pennsylvania. How much he pockets, is not known, but he didn't lose carrying. His profit is probably in the neighborhood of $90,000,000. And the Pennsylvania, ably managed, will add a good profit to that.

Admirers of the great race horse, Man o' War, propose a bronze statue of him, life size, to be erected on Churchill Downs, where the Kentucky Derby is run. Man o' War deserves the honor.

Leonardo Da Vinci made in wood an equestrian statue of heroic size, never cast in bronze. It has long since gone to decay, probably. If that could be recreated from the original model, how many millions would it be worth, eclipsing as it probably would, the world's greatest equestrian statue, Verrocchio's Colleoni.

Turbine and other engines may use mercury instead of water for steam power, according to scientists, with a saving in coal, increase in energy.

It takes about 500 more degrees of heat to boil mercury than water. But once boiling, mercury, which weighs 13½ times as much as water, is much more efficient.

It is very expensive, but can be used over and over. Mercury vapor is poisonous, steam from mercury does not wet steel.

The end of the fiscal year, June 30, Secretary Mellon says, will show a Government surplus of close to $200,000,000.

More than half of this surplus is income tax on Stock Exchange profits.

Bobby Jones, amazing Georgian, continues to be wonderful. Yesterday, in open golf play, he finished his last nine holes in 31, five under par.

That means a great deal to many, to whom the Einstein theory means little.

Not Columbus, or the ancient Scandinavian in his little boat, was the first to land in America, by many thousands of years.

In Florida, mastodon bones and ancient stone scrapers and roughly-shaped arrow heads, found under them, show that human beings lived in Florida at least 25,000 years ago.

Young women trying to get thin or keep thin by not eating enough, please observe that Marietta Millner, moving picture actress, is dead in Vienna. She was killed by "extreme dieting."

You teach your system not to absorb food and it may never learn again how to do it.

Former Atty.-Gen. Arthur K. Reading is ordered disbarred by Judge Sanderson, who finds Bar Association charges of grave misconduct in connection with Decime Club and L. A. W. races are established.

READING GIRL FLIER CHARGES UPHELD

Arthur K. Reading, former attorney-general of Massachusetts and former district attorney of Middlesex county, was ordered disbarred today by Judge George A. Sanderson of the Supreme Court, who found him guilty of gross misconduct.

"I find that the charges against Arthur K. Reading, set forth in the 12 articles of impeachment, a printed copy of which is annexed to the proceedings brought by the Massachusetts Bar Association, have been established by the evidence," said Judge Sanderson.

"I therefore find that he is guilty of gross misconduct within the meaning of the statutes, and a sufficient cause for his disbarment."

The decision bars the former attorney-general from practicing law in Massachusetts courts.

Reading was in office as Attorney-General in Governor Alvan T. Fuller's administration when Hugo Bezdek, manager of the Decime Club, filed suit in New York charging that Reading offered his own enrichment had sought to defeat an investigation of the

GIRL FLIER HURT, PILOT KILLED

Viola Gentry's Endurance Plane Crashes Into a Tree; Ashcraft Crushed to Death

Westbury, N. Y., June 28 AP—Jack Ashcraft, a professional pilot, was killed, and Miss Viola Gentry, known as "the flying cashier," was critically injured as their biplane, in which they were attempting to create an endurance record, fell into a hickory tree.

Ashcraft's neck was broken. Miss Gentry, suffering from internal injuries, a broken arm and lacerations was taken to Nassau County hospital, Mineola.

Physicians examining those pulled from the wreckage and asked what happened.

The plane took off from Roosevelt field at 5:45 p. m. yesterday, with 136 gallons of gasoline. It is believed their gasoline ran short and the plane fell into the tree near a nursery, 200 feet from the Jericho turnpike.

The gasoline tanks and carburetor were found to be dry.

The plane landed on its nose, the motor buried far in the ground. Ashcraft's body was pinioned by the motor to the ground. Miss Gentry was found on top of the car tank with one foot tangled in the wreckage. She was bleeding and hysterical. After telling her name over and over and inquiring repeatedly as to what happened, she lapsed into unconsciousness on her way to the hospital.

Both of Miss Gentry's arms were broken, one in several places. She regained consciousness soon after

They were endeavoring to set a new endurance mark and had left Roosevelt Field, N. Y., last night. Miss Gentry's injuries may prove fatal. Ashcraft was killed instantly.

BAY STATE AUTO TOOK MARLOW ON 'RIDE'

New York Detectives Arrive in Boston With New Clue to the Gang Slayer

The murder car in which Frank Marlow, racketeer, was "taken for a ride" was a Massachusetts automobile, registered in the name of a Bay State man.

The car is registered in Boston. This was asserted by police in New York today, simultaneously with the mysterious arrival in Boston of four more New York detectives.

The four detectives, unannounced, walked into police headquarters and immediately began questioning [illegible]. It is understood that [illegible] have [illegible] from this trunk of Johnny Wilson, ex-middleweight champion, now held as a material witness in the slaying, and from the suite of Marlow in Hotel Victoria, New York.

CAR REPORTED STOLEN.

The Massachusetts car seized in New York as the death car is registered in the name of a Louis Hurwitz, according to Police Inspector Timothy F. Sheehan, Inspector of carriages in the Boston department.

According to associates of Hurwitz, he drove the machine to New York last Thursday and, so far as they know, he is still in that city.

The car was reported to New York police as stolen, but no report of theft was made to Boston police.

The other Bostonians questioned in connection with the Marlow slaying were Dan Carroll, manager of Jim Maloney; Charles Solomon and his brother, "Chick" Solomon, and Eddie Mack, matchmaker at the Boston Garden.

A "hot tip" from Boston is said to have sent the New York detectives to the fight after the Boston men.

As soon as they reached headquarters they were taken to the

Sharkey Confident of Beating German

By JACK CONWAY

New York, June 28—"I will be back in Boston in a few days and start in training at once for my September shot at Maxx Schmeling," said Jack Sharkey, Hub heavyweight contender, from a ringside seat in the Yankee Stadium immediately after he had seen and heard the German declared the winner over Paulina Uzcudun.

Sharkey signed to meet the Milk Fund bout winner some time ago.

"I don't know where the bout will be staged," Sharkey continued, "and I don't care."

"I will be in the best shape of my career for the fight and I am confident I will win, so that the scene of the fray doesn't interest me.

"Am I glad that Schmeling and not Paulina won?

"I am neither glad nor sorry.

"I will beat Schmeling. I would beat Paulina if he had won and been chosen as my next opponent.

"The fact that I signed to meet the winner some time ago proves that I didn't care who won.

"Schmeling is the better fighter of the two. He proved that very decisively in the Yankee Stadium ring.

"The German will be a dangerous opponent, perhaps the most dan

SAYS MABEL WAS TOO TALKATIVE

Worcester, June 28. Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant Attorney-General of the United States, talked herself out of her job, Mrs. Claude U. Gilson, world traveler and lecturer, told delegates to the Quota International convention in Hotel Bancroft.

Mrs. Gilson intimated that women never will rise to the highest offices in the land until they learn to curb their tongues and acquire the faculty of listening to others.

"One of the most important things we must learn is to listen," she said. "It is a very rare woman who is willing to let others think she is stupid on any subject.

"But we must develop this quality before we ever will be able to rise to the highest office in the land. Mrs. Willebrandt didn't do it. She talked too much, and she paid the highest position of any woman in politics."

Mrs. Gilson added that American men and women are afraid of each other, except in petting parties.

MOTHER OF SIX BALKS AT MORE

Ridgefield, N. J., June 28 (INS)—Charles Schilling is serving a 30-day term in jail for demanding a huge family.

He is the husband who tried to use a blackjack on his wife, Ethel, to convince her that six children are not enough.

The imprisonment may have a depressing effect on his paternal ambitions. It did just about a year ago with Edward Cromwell, Bridgeport, Ct., daddy, who was jailed to accommodate his mate, who complained that 13 children were more than enough.

Mrs. Schilling appealed to Ridgefield police court to have her husband restrained from forcing her to have more children. Judge Alfred L. Fleischmann, who sentenced Schilling for disorderly conduct when he was unable to pay $25 fine, advised his wife to sue for separation.

"Yes, I believe in birth control," declared Mrs. Schilling today. She is 27. "Three children are enough. I'll never have another."

$100 FINE IN DEATH OF 20

The Preble Box Toe Co. explosion which shook Lynn November 1, taking the lives of 20 men, echoed today in superior criminal court at Salem.

The grand jury recently indicted the company in connection with the disaster.

U. S. Passports Sell for $5 in Paris Bars

Paris, June 28 — Counterfeit American passports bring an average of $500 each and find a ready sale among gullible European emigrants, but the genuine article may be had in any American bar in Paris from $1 up.

These "bargain" passports, it has just been revealed here, are left behind in scores by their rightful owners as security for drinks or small cash loans, seldom exceeding $5. Some are never redeemed, and may be had for the money that was loaned on them.

The fact that an American citizen does not necessarily need his passport to be readmitted into the United States, provided he can show a birth certificate or naturalization papers, is responsible for the abundance of these orphaned identity papers of Uncle Sam's in local saloon cash registers.

IDENTITY OF TORCH FIEND SUSPECT WILL BE KNOWN TODAY

BROADCAST PHOTOS OF YOUTH

Date With Sweetheart Is Cancelled by Auto Sheik

The identity of the torch fiend, wanted for brutal attacks upon Miss Alice M. Groden, a Cambridge school teacher, and Miss Mary Faramian, Back Bay cripple, will be made public by State police today.

The maniacal attacker according to State officers has a police record and it is considered likely he will use any means to effect an escape in the event that he is cornered.

It was expected that the man would be taken in custody early today when he was scheduled to visit a sweetheart in a city a few miles outside of Boston.

For hours officers were secreted near this house, said to be the home of a prominent young woman who has been keeping company with the man for several months, unaware of his maniacal double nature.

State Officers Edward J. Sherlock and Edward P. O'Neill withheld the name of the attacker so as to set the trap at the home of his girl friend. His failure to keep his mid-week appointment with the girl led the police to believe he has left the State.

After working throughout the night attaches of the Department of Public Safety mailed several hundred copies of photographs of the suspect, obtained from the rogues' gallery at Boston police headquarters.

No suggestion of a reward for the capture of the fugitive has been made, but it seemed likely that a reward of $500 would be posted in the event that the circulars broadcast today are not productive of quick results.

DUAL PERSONALITY

State officers showed no hesitation in admitting that when the man is finally taken into custody that revelations of his history and stories of his daring attacks upon women will rival those of the Lone Wolf, who terrorized women in the Back Bay a few years ago. The Lone Wolf is now serving a life sentence in state prison for his fiendish assaults.

It was reported that the State officers are in possession of evidence which they have procured during their investigation which shows that at least a dozen women have been cruelly beaten by the fiend, and that he perhaps has taken as many as 50 young women to the scene of his attack on Miss Groden and Miss Faramian, in Old County rd., on the Weston-Lincoln town line.

In the community where he lives, he is regarded as a model young man, according to the police. The officers picture him as a model Jekyll-Hyde.

TEACHER PROSTRATED

Because of the physical condition of Miss Alice Groden, who is reported to be in a serious nervous condition as a result of the attack by the fiend following her "blind date," the State officers have made no effort to question her. As soon as the man is arrested, however, he will be brought to her parents' summer home at Green Harbor, on Cape Cod, for the purpose of identification.

If Miss Groden is unable to see or identify the fiend he will be brought to the bedside of Miss Mary Faramian, in St. Joseph's Hospital, Nashua, N. H.

Miss Faramian has already promised the police that she will be ready at any time to identify her attacker and also come to the Middlesex Criminal Court in Cambridge to assist in his prosecution.

"If I have to be taken on a stretcher, in an ambulance, I will be there to help the authorities in any way that I can," Miss Faramian is quoted as saying when police interviewed her at a Boston hospital before her transfer to Nashua.

Miss Faramian has taken the attitude that while she has suffered a most harrowing experience at the hands of this man she is ready to aid in protecting other young women from any future attacks at the hands of the man.

FRANCE WANTS TIME ON U. S. WAR DEBT

Claim Mellon Pact Is 'Knife Held at Throat' to Force Payment

Paris, June 28—Negotiations will be opened with Washington by the French government, with a view to postponing beyond August 1 maturity of the $400,000,000 bill for war stocks sold to France when the American expeditionary force left for home.

The Chamber of Deputies adopted a resolution authorizing this action, the resolution having been framed with consent of the government. Longer time is desired in which to decide whether to ratify the war debt settlement to the United States.

According to the Melion-Berenger debt settlement, France must ratify this agreement before August 1, if the war stocks bill is to be included in its terms. Otherwise this bill falls due on that date.

Led by Franklin-Bouillon, who said this arrangement was a knife at the throat of France, Parliament rebelled against the arrangement and obliged the government to ask Washington for postponement.

Socialist deputies abstained from voting which was adopted on show of hands with only two votes opposing.

When the Chamber had expressed its will, Premier Raymond Poincare told the Deputies he would apply himself with "all my devotion and all my patriotism" to carry out its wishes. That is to say, he will do his best to persuade Washington to postpone the maturity date of the war stocks bill and let Parliament take its time about ratifying the agreement on war debts.

The motion adopted by the Chamber read, "Before entering upon discussion of ratification of Inter-Allied debts and because of the limited time left before maturing of the war stocks debt, the Chamber, desirous of proceeding to thorough examination of the text of the Washington and London debt accords and in view of the new experts' plan (Young reparations plan), takes cognizance of declarations of the government which has decided to open new negotiations with the United States with a view to postponing the maturity date of the war stocks obligations.

MAINE ANTIS PLAN FIGHT TO BEAT GOULD

Will Start Big Drive to Defeat the Senator for Re-election

Presque Isle, Me., June 28 (AP)—Maine, which 75 years ago adopted a prohibitory liquor law, today learned that its junior United States Senator, elected on a dry platform, was an advocate of modification.

Senator Arthur R. Gould, Republican, in a support of a testimonial letter in which he told a St. Louis grape juice company he had secured "some very good results" from the concern's unfermented product, asserted that it was his "right to have and drink" light wines and beer.

"Everybody who knows me," he declared, "knows that the sentiments relating to prohibition as expressed in that letter are my sentiments." He said that the licensing of light wines and beer would be a great improvement over the present prohibition law, which seems impossible to enforce.

DRYS OPEN CAMPAIGN.

The senator's statement drew immediate announcements from anti-saloon leaders that the State's dry forces would be aligned against his re-election a year hence.

The letter was made public yesterday in a St. Louis civil action after counsel for the grape juice company said it would be introduced to refute claims that the concern's product was unsatisfactory.

Questioned at his home here, Senator Gould was vehement in defense of his right to "have, make and drink" wine and beer. Residents of his own section of northern Maine make wine from wild berries and grapes," he said. "God Almighty put those flowers and vines on the earth and he intended them to be used."

OPPOSED JONES LAW

Senator Gould, who was elected in 1926 to fill the unexpired term of the late Bert M. Fernald, voted against the recently enacted Jones law, which imposes stiff penalties for liquor law violations, because he "had always stood that way." He has not announced his candidacy for re-election.

The Rev. Frederick W. Smith of Waterville, executive secretary of the Maine Christian Civic League, stated last night that the organization would oppose Senator Gould's re-election. The league represents the Anti-Saloon League of America, which has no branch in Maine.

Mrs. Althea G. Quinby, State president of the W. C. T. U., said that "Senator Gould was not the candidate of the W. C. T. U. Certainly the organization will be even more frank and outspoken against his re-election."

G. E. OFFICIALS HIT BACK AT BAUER

The alleged gallantry of Mayor Ralph S. Bauer of Lynn in setting the date of his home city's big tercentenary celebration "just to suit the convenience of one woman" today seemed likely to disrupt the anniversary's most spectacular feature, the proposed civic and military parade.

According to Mayor Bauer himself, the trouble all hinges upon the "unpatriotic" and "dollar crazy" policy of the General Electric Co. of Lynn which refuses to shut up shop on Wednesday afternoon when the parade is scheduled to take place.

Since some 12,000 of Lynn's 100,000 citizens are General Electric employes and since General Electric Co. workers comprise a principal part of the personnel of most of the fraternal and military bodies which are expected to form the parade column, chances of a successful turnout without General Electric co-operation look slim.

Officials of the company, nevertheless, turned deaf ears today to the increasingly emphatic expostulations of the city's chief executive.

Parade or no parade, tercentenary or no tercentenary, business as usual would be the General Electric program on Wednesday, it was announced.

The following reasons were given:

First, a General Electric shutdown for half a day would cost employes $30,000 or $40,000 in forfeited wages, which loss would be passed on to Lynn merchants, landlords, etc.

Secondly, General Electric employes as a whole prefer to work and get paid rather than to celebrate at their own expense.

Thirdly—and most important—General Electric Co. officials are "tired and sick" of trying to cooperate with Mayor Bauer who has been "double-crossed" in his management of the whole tercentenary celebration, even going so far as to change the date of the entire affair to please Marchioness Gladys Townshend, mayor of King's Lynn, England, who found it inconvenient to be on hand as guest of honor during the week of June 17 which actually marked the 300th anniversary of Lynn, Mass.

According to General Electric company heads, the marchioness had an engagement at London on June 21, so she asked Mayor Bauer to put off his party. He did so, it is alleged, and thereby necessitated a rearrangement of all the events in the program, the parade date falls on the day before the 4th of July, threatening to bring two holidays together.

However, although Wednesday may be a holiday for the rest of Lynn, it will be just another day for the General Electric, according to latest bulletins.

Wine Making Illegal, Says Prohibition Director

Washington, June 28 (AP)—Prohibition enforcement officials hold views in sharp contrast to those expressed by Senator Arthur R. Gould of Maine in his defence of his "right to have, make and drink" light wines and beer.

While Prohibition Commissioner Doran and Assistant Secretary Lowman of the treasury have refused to comment on the senator's letter, made public in a St. Louis court case, saying he had obtained "some very fair results" with the product of a grape juice company to be sold in wine form, the two officials have made it clear that they regard the making of wine from fruit juices as a violation of the prohibition law.

BOY, 15, BEATS ASIATIC FEVER

New York, June 28 (INS)—Kala-Azar, the usually fatal Asiatic disease which saps the vitality like a vampire, today lost another round to George Mosher, the New York boy who has been waging a fight in the Seaside Hospital at New Dorp, Staten Island.

His ninth blood transfusion since he has been in the hospital helped him so greatly that today he was able almost to enjoy his 15th birthday.

Nurses were to hold a quiet celebration for him late in the day and George was cheerful and smiling. Doctors said today he showed greater strength than at any time since the fight began a week. And they were somewhat puzzled as to the amazing comeback.

The flames were extinguished without patients in the hospital learning that a fire had broken out. There was no excitement.

Film Actors' Plea Rejected by Equity

Hollywood, Cal., June 28 (AP)—Frank Gillmore, president of the Actors Equity Association, announced today that he could "take no notice, under the constitution," of a petition presented last Tuesday night by 33 actors and actresses of the film colony here. The petition requested, among other considerations, that the signers, all of whom were represented to be members of the association, be granted a voice in the conduct of Equity's campaign for an "Equity shop" in film productions.

Reading Disbarred by Supreme Court Order

MONJAR CHARGES PRESSED.

Monjar also alleged that Reading forced him to give up certain securities.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives took up the matter. A special committee was named to make a thorough probe. Charges were also made regarding the Attorney-General's conduct in connection with the L. A. W. Corporation, an auto financing concern.

The special legislative committee made a report advising the House to take impeachment proceedings. Reading resigned and the case ended as far as the Legislature was concerned. The Massachusetts Bar Association took it up and voted to lay it before the Supreme Court for adjudication.

Before Judge Sanderson, where President Frederick W. Mansfield, of the bar association, presented the case against Reading, the latter made a spirited defense of himself, ending with the assertion that while his judgment may have been poor, his heart was right.

The articles of impeachment which Judge Sanderson mentioned in his finding charged Reading with misconduct and maladministration in office, in accepting employment by the United L. A. W. Corporation and subsidiaries and that he undertook to adjust controversies between the subsidiaries and Louis A. Wolfe, president, which he well knew did involve certain criminal offenses."

ARTICLES OF IMPEACHMENT

Another charge was that he used a police inspector to intimidate Wolfe. Another that he brought his office into disrepute by effecting the settlement of divers criminal wrongs without due process of law.

It was charged also that he attempted to disuade New York officials from action in connection with the Decimo Club and secretly advised removal of $300,000 from reach of New York process.

Other articles referred also to the Decimo Club, to Reading's receipt of a $25,000 fee and the making out of checks to him under another name.

10 INJURED IN TWO AUTO CRASHES

Two persons are on a hospital danger list, five other persons were hurt, and colliding automobiles were buried across the street onto adjoining lawn, in an accident at Broadway and Quincy st., Cambridge, early today.

Miss Catherine C. Morrisey of 23 Whittier st., Cambridge, and Paul F. Burton of 726 Massachusetts ave., are at the Cambridge City Hospital in a serious condition.

Joel K. Harris of 7 Amboy st., Allston, and his wife, Cordelia, with Ruth Harding of 83 Brattle st., Cambridge, are all at the same hospital.

An unidentified woman was reported to have been treated at the hospital and permitted to go home. One of the cars buried struck and broke a stone post surrounding the old Germanic Museum, Harvard University, and lodged on the lawn.

The other car was thrown to another lawn by force of the impact.

PLANE DEFECTS DELAY ROME FLIGHT

Old Orchard, Me., June 28—Having paid $500 apiece for their new ship than was believed to be worth and after expending $1400 additional for new instruments and repairs, Roger Williams Straus and Capt. Lewis A. Yancey are here in the Reliance monoplane Pathfinder, which is to replace the Green Flash on the deferred transatlantic flight to Rome, only to find two days of delay, faulty fuel and their plans set back at least two days.

Dean Brauer of the Wright motors field service department, who has been here several days, and John Mercurio, mechanic who flew up from New York with Williams and Yancey, were both at the airport, giving the ship the once over.

They were joined in the afternoon by Ben Zdora, mechanic who groomed the Green Flash. Ben arrived by motor car after a 10-hour drive up from New York. It is expected that before the take-off Kenneth J. Boedecker, chief of the Wright service department, will be on hand. Because of his anticipated arrival, Mr. and Mrs. John Hutchinson, who operate the Brunswick Hotel, have arranged to lay in an extra supply of olives, for they well remember the inroads Ken made on his last visit.

The craft looks exactly like the Green Flash except for the markings. The fuselae and landing gear cowling are light green, much lighter than the Green Flash fuselage's predecessor and the name is painted in white, diagonally across the side. The wings and nose on the Pathfinder are gray, with the exception of a dash of green at the pivot point of the propeller.

Several fuel tests are to be made, even to experimenting with a mixture of benzol. Both fliers were driven down to Wells Beach to look at a stretch of cement state road which has been suggested as a possible take-off point.

Banned Infant Leaves U. S. for 'Somewhere'

Unless Uncle Sam experiences a change of heart, which is not likely, the steamer Presidente Wilson, due here at noon tomorrow for the Azores, Lisbon, Naples and Trieste, will carry away from these shores the youngest deportee ever to leave the country without a parent or guardian.

The innocent victim of circumstances and the law, is Elisa Valerie, 14 months old, whose mother, a Portuguese stewardess employed on the Presidents Wilson, died recently at Ellis Island, where she was confined following an attempt to smuggle the child ashore from the ship. The girl-mother did not reveal the father's name before she passed away, and unless he comes forward to claim the baby, it will go to her family in Lis-

Maria Dolores Valeria brought the baby over some time ago, and hid her away in a clothes closet on the ship, successfully keeping her out of sight during the trip. She was determined to hunt up the father of the child, and try to get him to acknowledge the little one and make amends. Her plans were frustrated, however, when she was held up awhile leaving the Wilson with the baby hidden in a coat.

Little Elisa, foreign born and illegally in the country, was doomed to deportation even before the decree of the stern special inquiry board at Ellis Island. The heartbroken mother pined away and died, realizing that her hopes of giving her child a same ways

January Gets Stormy on June Night

A January blizzard on a warm June evening gave residents of Nahant something to think about today.

The January blizzard was no phenomenon of the weather. It was Ralph Januzzy, ex-Nahant high school football star, who went into violent action in aid of law and order and then got a beating for his trouble.

A fracas occurred in the dance hall at the Relay House, and Patrolman Thomas O'Connor went to the scene and arrested Frank D.

The prisoner escaped from the officer in the hotel yard and was fleeing when Young January, who works for his father at a nearby garage, brought him down with a flying tackle after the officer had fired a shot into the air.

Some time later, a group of young men from the dance hall appeared at the January garage and gave the young athlete a beating. Both the young man's parents were roughly handled when they went to the rescue of their son.

HOOVER IN FIRST STATEMENT ON TARIFF, CALLS FOR SUGAR DUTY

LEVY FAIR TO ALL URGED

Announces Stand After Smoot Says Sliding Scale Plan Is Being Considered

Washington, June 28—In his first official pronouncement on the tariff since the subject was taken up by Congress six months ago, President Hoover favors a sugar tariff. He does not advocate any particular form of duty, but let it be known that he favors a tariff that will protect both the producers and the consumers.

This statement was issued at the White House after testimony had been given before a Senate finance sub-committee that the chief executive was "much interested in protection for the domestic sugar industry."

It followed also a declaration by Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, chairman of the finance committee, that he was considering a sliding scale sugar tariff plan as a possible substitute for the flat increased rate of 2.40 cents a pound on Cuban raw sugar as provided in the House bill. The present rate is

HOOVER'S STATEMENT

"The President has had sliding scales of sugar duties submitted him by members of the committees," the White House statement said. "The object of these was to protect the consumers as well as the producers. He has not expressed himself on them, but of course would be glad to see any arrangement which would effect the dual purpose."

The Finance Committee chairman injected another surprise yesterday declaring for limitation of free importation of Philippine sugar.

Smoot declared he would favor limiting the free importation of sugar from the Philippines to 800,000 tons, approximately the present output of the Islands.

He said when the 1909 tariff law placed a 300,000-ton limitation on Philippine sugar imports, the insular interests contended they would never exceed that production but that it had more than doubled since then. The limitation later was taken off.

The 800,000-ton restriction, the Utah Senator said, would protect everybody, including the growers in the United States and in the Islands.

ON MAPLE SUGAR

George C. Cary, St. Johnsbury, Vt., urged the subcommittee to raise the rate on maple sugar to 6 cents a pound and that on maple syrup to 6 cents. The House bill provides a duty of 7½ cents on maple sugar and 5 cents on maple syrup.

Mr. Cary said Canadian imports were increasing, and that the Canadian product was selling at 1½ cents a pound less than domestic on this side of the border.

A. E. Payson of Portsmouth, Ct., asked an increase to 25 cents in the duty proposed for pint thermos bottles, which is 15 cents now and 45 per cent ad valorem. He also asked higher duties for sizes over one quart.

Philip S. Cohen of New York, appearing for the American Association of Felt & Straw Goods Importers, and the Millinery Association of America, urged that the duty on trimmed fur felt hats be left unchanged.

JEWELRY DEMANDS

Representing novelty jewelry distributors, David J. Gallert of New York, said the duty proposed on such articles meant a rate of 110 per cent ad valorem. He exhibited necklaces to show that those imported cost more than those of domestic manufacture, and asked that the present duty of 80 per cent be retained.

Walter H. Kahn of New York, representing diamond importers and dealers, asked that the tariff be reduced to 10 per cent.

"Leaving that rate at its present level of 20 per cent," he said, would simply be handing this entire business over to smugglers who not only defraud the Government but take the bread out of the mouth of the honest merchant."

Exemption of embroidered cotton gloves from a duty of 50 per cent under one section of the bill was asked by H. O. Lloyd of New York, representing glove importers.

QUESTIONS WOOL GRAPH

Walter Humphrey, Boston, representing the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, testified before sub-committee on wool regarding the authenticity of a statistical graph on fluctuations in wool fabrics.

Senator Green, Republican, of Vermont, had asked a copy of the graph as a foundation for future Senate debate, with a view to making wool fabrics schedules specific instead of ad valorem.

Frank J. Nolan, New York, representing the national council of American Importers and Traders, said ad valorem duties on woven wool fabrics should not be increased.

"The fastidious customer will always indulge his taste according to his pocketbook," he declared. "This type of merchandise serves as a stimulant to our prospective industries, particularly fine wools. It is not a deterrent."

To women's fashions he laid the present depression of the wool industry.

private office of Commissioner Whalen.

Johnny Wilson faced a definite criminal charge today, it was announced by Commissioner Whalen, who said the exchange would be prosecuted for violation of the Sullivan anti-arms law. Wilson, former middleweight champion, has been held in the Marlow slaying as a material witness.

"Valuable papers," were said to have been taken from Wilson's trunk in the hotel room by police. A pistol on which the criminal charge will be based was also found in the trunk, police say.

Wilson was at Marlow's last supper, shortly before he was taken for a ride.

Squads of police swept night clubs and speakeasies early today obstensibly for liquor, but in reality for women and men wanted in connection with this case.

Known New York gun toters were being thoroughly checked up by police in the intensive drive.

Questioning of the several men brought in has revealed a maze of conflicting statements, which authorities are attempting to piece into the true picture of the death ride.

New York detectives are also scouring the underworld of Philadelphia to become acquainted with operations of the slain racketeer there.

The Purple Gang in Detroit is being questioned by New York detectives for information as to Marlow's connection with that gang.

Despite the release of Michael "Mickey the Wise Guy" Rocco, with the sanction of New York police in charge of the Boston end of the investigation, more arrests were expected here today.

Police intimated that Mickey, who had discarded the flashy raiment of the gangster for the conservative dress of a business man when he appeared at headquarters, will be watched closely as the case develops.

After his release it was reported from New York that definite information in the hands of Police Commissioner Grover Whalen tended to tie him up with the actual "ride" on which Marlow was taken.

Positive tie-up of "Mickey the Wise Guy" was purported to come from a former associate of Marlow's almost as soon as he had signed the release which gave him freedom from the City prison here, where he had been detained at the behest of the New York police as a "suspicious person."

Marcy Selden, 19, New York night club entertainer, one of the many women who figured in Marlow's life, is said to have implicated Rocco in statements she made.

This woman, who is thought to have seen Marlow shortly before his death, is said to have informed police that Marlow mentioned "Mickey" to her.

A liquor and dope ring supplying New England has been established here, New York police say.

Under protection due to "inside connections" of the Boston sporting men, the proceeds from the illicit traffic in drugs and drink mount to millions annually, it is said.

Exclusive leadership in the Boston "racket" lies in one man, whom the New York police wish to question in connection with the Marlow case.

The leader and his lieutenant are little known, save in official circles, to be engaged in the occupations from which the greater per cent of the wealth they are reputed to have, comes, it is said.

Some of the persons already taken into custody by the New York police in connection with the Marlow slaying as material witnesses and those who have been questioned and released, are considered by the New York police to be mere puppets for masters whose influence and wealth are great.

The leader in Boston is said to have many subordinates. Besides a legitimate business, he has these subordinates handling liquor, dope and gaming "rackets."

Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson of the Boston police has admitted he investigated a report that Johnny Wilson, held in New York, was carrying a gun in Boston, and found it to be true.

"I have to carry it for protection," the police commissioner quoted the former middleweight champion as saying. "I have $5000 with me now."

Any one of these activities, together with Marlow's interest in sporting events may have a connection with his slaying, according to the theory of New York police.

New developments moved quickly in the Boston round-up, and it was learned that the police were about to explode the lid off Boston gangdom which would connect up members with nearly a dozen killings during the past several years.

The police also were investigating the story that since Marlow endeavored to break into the racket in New England, a Boston racketeer has lost over $100,000 worth of rum to hi-jackers, and that when the promoter sent out a warning, Marlow laughed derisively and his gang boasted that the hi-jacking would go on regardless of the fact that a South Boston man was killed two years after getting a similar warning.

The attempt of the Al Capone Chicago gang to break into a slot machine racket in Boston, and the offer of $75,000 in an effort to bribe persons to permit the entry of these money machines into Boston, has been reported.

New York police claimed to have reports that place Michael Rocco about the time of the slaying in a Brooklyn restaurant not far from where Marlow's body was found.

Unmoved by questions, Rocco, who had smilingly and apologetically refused to answer unless his counsel was present, stated he was not in New York, at the time of the slaying.

Rocco is the sixth man who has been questioned in Boston during the last 36 hours and all have been eliminated for the time being from the case. Despite that fact they feel assured that there are one or two Boston gunmen deep in the slaying, the motive for which originated in this city.

Of the men interviewed, one was the person who sent a money order for $3500 to "Eddie" Lewis. He was willing to talk with the police and said that he and Lewis had been friends for years and that it was not unusual for him to wire for large sums of money. This was particularly the case after a tough day at the track. In accounting for the story of the disposition of the money in New York, the man knew nothing.

AUTO COLLEGE "ANCHORS" IN BOSTON

The Omnibus College, known as a "college on wheels," is at the Boston Auto Camp on Commonwealth ave., Brighton, with a party of 16.

The caravan carrying the party is made up of six large busses, one of the largest field cafeterias on the highways, a baggage car, and the director's car. The "college" is under the auspices of Southwestern College of Winfield, Kan., and is directed by Dr. William M. Goldsmith, head of the biology department at the college.

The regular instructional staff of this college on wheels corresponds to that of the average summer college. Besides Dr. Goldsmith, the staff includes Amy H. Goldsmith, dean of women and dietitian, Lois Hall of Oklahoma City, in charge of history; Lulu M. Schulze, professor of biology at Central Wesleyan College, Warrenton, Mo., Florence Dix of Fort Dodge, Ia., lecturer in history and biology; Elma Hazard of Hutchinson, Kan., literary instructor; Ellen Van Cleve of Wichita, Kan., nurse, H. Walton, Garden City, music director.

Included in the party are students from 16 states, who will receive college credits for the seven weeks' tour. Each morning at the camp site there is a class, after which historic and scenic spots are visited.

Mrs. Goldsmith, who is head of the home economics department at Southwestern College, prepares the menus, and a chef with two helpers prepare the meals, which are served from the unique field cafeteria car.

Clothes of the members of the party are kept nice in a dust proof compartment of the baggage car. The large freight car takes care of all the baggage, including the tents, so that the tops of the busses may be removed at times for observation purposes.

Salesman, 57, Pays $2 Each for Five Stolen Kisses

Gardiner, Me., June 28—Stolen kisses from Glenys Pulsifer, 18, of Pittston, Me., cost Charles H. McKenna, 57, of Farmingdale, a nursery stock salesman, plenty.

The girl told Judge Goodspeed in municipal court that McKenna kissed her five times despite her protests, while on a business call at her home. He was fined $5 and costs, which was equivalent to $2 a kiss. Her father, Edward T. Pulsifer, was out in a field building a fence at the time of the alleged osculations.

OCEAN GIVES UP CHILD'S BANK

When Bug Lighthouse, at the entrance to Boston Harbor, was destroyed by fire on June 7, the wreckage toppling into the water after the flames had done their work, carried into the depths a cherished possession of Jimmy Small, eight-year-old son of the keeper of the light, Thomas Small. A tin box, containing the boy's savings, amounting to $2, most of it in pennies was lost. Jimmy, although crying his loss bravely, was thankful that his daddy had escaped with his life, and that he and his mother had not yet gone to the light to make their home for the summer.

A day or two ago, while a party of engineers attached to the United States District Engineers office here was engaged in the vicinity in dragging operations, what should they haul up but the very same tin box, tightly closed and with its precious contents intact. Jimmy was one of the happiest boys in Boston when the box had been restored to him.

Polish Club Aroused Over Liquor Seizure

Northampton, June 28 — Polish citizens of Northampton are considerably aroused over a raid early in the morning by police, recently built by the White Eagle Home Association on Pearl st., opposite the Union Station, in which police seized a quantity of beer and other alleged liquor. It is understood that Patrolman John J. O'Donnell shortly after midnight found a door of the hall ajar, entered and discovered the liquor. He immediately obtained a search warrant and returned with Sergt. Harry J. Kelly and Patrolmen Roger McGrath and Clifford J. Flynn.

The officers confiscated 284 pints of beer in bottles, five gallons of gin and about four gallons of whiskey, as well as numerous jugs and bottles. No arrests were made.

VIOLA GENTRY IS HURT BADLY; PILOT DEAD

Girl's Plane Hits Tree in Her Quest for Record; Her Condition Is Critical

arriving at the hospital, and asked about Ashcraft, but she was not told of his death.

At the hospital it was said the full extent of her injuries could not be told immediately, but it was admitted her condition was critical.

A fog lay low blanketed the flying field and surrounding country for several hours today and was believed to be a contributing factor as to the accident.

Ashcraft was 33 and was born in Pennington, Ga. He had been flying for years and his associates considered him an expert pilot. He figured in a smash-up at Baton Rouge, La., while on a flying circus. His passenger at that time was killed and Ashcraft was in a hospital for a long period.

Miss Gentry was formerly a cashier in a restaurant. She attracted attention in 1926 by piloting a plane under the Brooklyn and Manhattan bridges, New York.

In 1928 she set an endurance solo record for women fliers by staying in the air over Roosevelt Field for 6 hours and 37 seconds.

The flight was the young woman's second attempt to establish an endurance flight record. Her plane joined that in which Martin Jensen, accompanied by his wife and a pilot, was making a similar attempt over Long Island. Jensen had been up since Wednesday night.

Before her take-off Miss Gentry had a conversation across the cabin to provide her with a private compartment. She said after her previous attempt she had received several letters from persons she described as "gossips."

Mrs. Jensen dropped a note to Miss Gentry last night asking her to come up and keep them company in the lonely night flight on the island.

Two Women Fliers Going Strong in Endurance Test

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., June 28 (AP)—Two women were competing in friendly rivalry today for the honor of remaining in the air longer than one man ever has done before.

Mrs. Martin Jensen, as an active member of the crew of the monoplane Three Musketeers, which took off on a refueling endurance flight at 7:32 Wednesday night, was joined in the air by Miss Viola Gentry, who, with a male companion, also started an endurance attempt at 8:49:26.

The Three Musketeers, after three refuelings, have still gone strong toward the record of 172:32:1 hours which it will officially pass in four minutes and two seconds past 5 a. m. next Thursday. Martin Jensen and William Erbach are the other members of its crew.

Miss Gentry took off in a light open plane piloted by Clint Ashcraft. It was her second attempt at a refueling record, and before going up she had a curtain put across the center of her cabin to provide privacy for herself.

She was accompanied by Jack Aschraft, an experienced pilot. The plane carried 116 gallons of gasoline, and it was planned to make the first refueling today from a plane piloted by Paul Dixon and Clude Kincaid of Hartford, Ct.

Hawks on Return Hop to Roosevelt Field

Los Angeles, June 28—Capt. Frank Hawks took off for New York at 3:37:47 a. m. today on his return non-stop flight tot New York.

His departure occurred more than seven hours after he had arrived at the airport here after having completed the non-stop flight from Roosevelt Field in 19 hours, 10 minues and 23 seconds, almost five hours more than the time established by the late C. B. D. Collyer and the late Harry Tucker on and east to west cross-country flight.

A leak in the carburetor was found to be irreparable at 1:20 p. m., as Hawks was preparing to climb into the cockpit for the second leg of his journey. Messengers were sent to the Lockheed Aircraft factory at Burbank, Cal., a suburb, for a new carburetor. It was put on the plans at once.

Violent Storm Forces Cleveland Plane Down

Cleveland, O., June 28 (INS)—A violent rainstorm halted the endurance flight attempt of the monoplane, City of Cleveland, at 1:40 a. m. today. The plane, piloted by Byron Newcomb and Roy Mitchell, had taken off at 7:16 p. m. last night.

Pilot Newcomb said he tried to remain aloft despite the storm, but that lightning blinded him.

Southern Cross Arrives Safe at Singapore

Singapore, Straits Settlement, June 28 (AP)—Capt. Charles Kingsford Smith and his three companions arrived here today in their plane the Southern Cross, from Derby, Western Australia, en route to England. They covered a distance of about 1650 miles. The fliers set out from Sydney, N. S. W., Tuesday morning in an effort to break the 15-day record between England and Australia of Bert Hinkler.

Morse, however, declined to serve, and petitions that the Thomas National Bank of Waterville, Me., or some other suitable person administer the estate.

She's a Lioness, but Nobody Loves Her

New York, June 28 (INS)—Miss Fulton, lioness at the Central Park Zoo, felt like the girl that men forgot today. No one offered to buy her at the annual auction of surplus animals. A one-eyed hyena sold for $15, while a camel netted the city $600.

The Less the Suits, the More the Bathers

Rome, June 28 (AP)—So many tourists have been avoiding Atrio, the coast beaches because of censorship of bathing suits that the government has amended regulations. The new code says bathers may enjoy the sea and sand cure without being obliged to undergo too severe limitation.

FLAG WINNERS GIVEN GREAT WELCOME

San Francisco, June 28—Dazed a bit by the warmth and breadth of their reception but striving to disguise it, four wide-eyed representatives of America's much discussed "younger generation" have captured San Francisco today and in turn have been captured.

They took the city by the very nature of their visit—they, among a quarter million boys and girls just like them, had been named the nation's flag champions. They held it, made it more secure by the natural, level-headed way in which they accepted the wide acclaim that their achievement brought. Dazed and striving to hide it; grateful and proud of it.

It was no ordinary experience that San Francisco provided these four. City officials, civic organization, the military, private citizens, youngsters from our schools, joined in paying tribute to them for their victory in the first national flag contest.

GREETED BY MAYOR

It began officially Wednesday at the city hall. Through streets flag decorated in honor of what they had done, the four champions rode behind an escort of motorcycle police to the city's home. They faced batteries of "still" and "movie" cameras, shook hands with scores who rushed to offer congratulations; accepted offerings of flowers. Renewed acquaintances with local, regional-winners in the nationwide contest whom they had met in the East.

And with the municipal orchestra playing, "California Here I Come," they passed into the city hall torunds, amid the applause of a throng that overflowed the corridors and packed the three galleries above.

Mayor James Rolph, Jr., bade them welcome, termed their visit "A very sweet compliment to us" and outlined the objects of the contest which brought the four to San Francisco on their prize trip around the world. Then he introduced the champions.

Miss Alma Groves, from Byronville, Ga., whose ambition is to become a schoolteacher; Miss Mary S. McGonigal, of Troy, N. Y., leader of the campfire girls, who wants to become an author; Robert Sullivan, of Syracuse, N. Y., whose ambition it is to become a playwright or producer and Merle Clark, of Detroit, who will enter the University of Michigan to study for the bar.

HISTORIC FLAGS

And while flashlights popped and listeners applauded and the orchestra played, the four rose in turn and bowed and looked glad to be here.

Then the mayor introduced others of the round-the-world party—Mrs. Edward C. Gregory of North Carolina, daughter of Sen. Overman, who will chaperone the tour, and Floyd Williamson, representative of the Hearst newspapers which sponsored the contest.

He called upon Miss Evelyn Durel, of Polytechnic high school, regional winner of the contest, to welcome the champions on behalf of the state's school children. She introduced Peter Capitol, Stockton high school student, who shared regional honors with her.

His address of welcome, delivered from the staircase, flanked by a color guard of police with the stars and stripes and the bear flag brought home one more lesson of patriotism to the youthful champions of the flag.

It included reference to two flags draped in the place of honor in the city hall, "the first American flag to be carried through the streets of Berlin at the close of the last war—that of San Francisco's own 363d Infantry; and the same regiment's service flag with its 285 gold stars."

In a rich Georgian drawl that was straight to the hearts of the audience, Miss Groves responded to the welcome. "Yes," she was "delighted to be h'yuh." All she said was seconded by Robert Sullivan, who declared "I'd just as soon stay right here. I already feel that I've belonged here for years. I always thought I'd like San Francisco, now I know it."

SEE AERIAL CIRCUS

From the City Hall the party rushed to Crissy Field. First here was the "Star Spangled Banner" by the municipal orchestra. More flowers pressed upon the visitors, more handshaking and congratulations and taking of pictures.

At Crissy Field Lieut.-Col Gerald C. Brant, commandant, arranged an aerial demonstration. Training planes, Douglas cruisers, the big amphibian, pursuit craft all went aloft and were put through their paces, while Alma and Mary and Rob and Robert said "ah" and "oh." And "look at that one."

They liked Col. Brant. He returned the compliment by adding another event to their program of entertainment. Yesterday the party were the guests of the colonel at an "army fare" luncheon at the Presidio just before boarding the President Monroe for their round the world journey.

Wife Asks Aid to Find Missing Army Man

Believing him a victim of amnesia, Mrs. Gerald W. Kelley of 326 Fayette st., Wollaston, has appealed to the Boston Evening American to aid her in a search for her husband missing since May 31.

He had been an instructor in military training at the army base, Boston. The last seen of him he wore his army uniform. He weighs 190 pounds and is 5 feet 8 inches and has a blonde complexion. Besides his wife Kelley also has a 1-year-old baby who constantly calls for her daddy.

WHITE WOMEN AND CHINESE HUSBAND—what it means to marry one of so different a race is graphically told in the autobiography of Mrs. Li Ah tan, for years a dweller in London's Chinatown—the sinister Limehouse district. In the American Weekly, issued with next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

One-Legged Men Who Fled Jail Find Going Hard

Lake City, Fla., June 28 (AP)—A couple of one-legged men in an automobile. A couple of officers in another automobile.

"Let's see that list of fugitives," said one of the officers.

"Just as I thought. Hey, you one-legged guys, pull over! curb. Where do you think you're going?"

"For a ride," said Number 1867 of the state prison, Raiford, Fla., "It got monotonous and we thought we'd take a spin. We knew we couldn't get far with those wooden identification tags."

"Well, come on and finish your ride with us," suggested the officer.

"Glad to," said Number 1867.

NEW SURFACE ON TREMONT ST. SOON

Mayor Nichols has given positive assurance that Tremont st., between Park and Boylston sts., will soon be resurfaced.

The mayor agreed that there was good ground for the thousands of protests concerning the condition of the street which have reached City Hall. Many of these were addressed to the mayor by automobilists who have been obliged to follow a devious course between its hills and valleys.

The city also has been receiving much unfavorable advertising from visitors who thought that with the main part of one of Boston's best known streets in such bad condition the remainder of the city must be almost beyond description.

Mayor Nichols explained that the problem has been receiving his attention for some time and that there have been conferences of city officials with a view of agreeing on a program to obtain the best possible work with the least interruption to traffic and business.

More than routine attention has to be given to the materials used, it was explained, because of the unusually heavy wear and tear on the paving from the thousands of motor vehicles which pass over the street daily. It was the mayor's estimate that work on the street would be started within two weeks by the public works department.

Latest Novelty in Paris Is Choker Collar

Paris, June 28—New novelties include little dog collars of metal ribbon with jeweled fastenings. They are not meant for dowagers, but are suggested as accessories with mid-summer suits and ensembles, particularly with satin costumes.

Another new neck ornament is a double row of beads with a heavy tassel of the beads fastening at the side. There is a short silver or gold chain connecting the tassel and loose end of the beads.

Maine Plans Fight on Tree Insects

Augusta, Me., June 28—Prof. Harry B. Peirson, state entomologist, returned from Bar Harbor where he visited the forest insect laboratory maintained by the Maine Coast Service. He says that plans for this year are being concentrated on working out measures for the control of two new pests which have invaded the white birch areas of the state, the birch leaf mining sawfly and the birch case bearer.

Some 24 large cages have been erected for the rearing of parasites of already five species have been found. Approximately 100 flies a day are emerging from the cages and habits of these are being studied in detail.

NEW ENGLAND PLAYGROUND HEADS MEET

Fitchburg, June 28—The Seventh Annual Conference of New England Summer Playground Workers is being conducted at Crocker Field and will be continued through Saturday. Nearly 200 are attending.

There were addresses of welcome by Mayor Joseph N. Carriere, Chairman Charles F. Sweeney and other members of the Fitchburg park commission, after which John J. Mullaney, chairman of the playgrounds' commission of Gardner, gave an address.

Exercises were held in Chamber of Commerce Hall, beginning with a miniature drama tournament, under the direction of Mrs. Mabel Foote Hobbs, drama consultant of the National Playgrounds' Association. It was followed by a general discussion of playground problems.

The first thing on the program today was a song period, with Mayor Carriere as a leader. Mrs. Grace Drysdale of Cambridge, Mrs. Hobbs, Duncan M. Dossett and Fitchburg, Harold Gebhardt of Manchester, N. H.; A. R. Wellington, field secretary for the national association, and Thomas Ferguson, instructor of games at Harvard Summer School.

Elinor De Wolf Jackson Weds Tomorrow at Beverly Farms

Society Favorite to Become Bride of Augustus Flagg Doty in Picturesque Ceremony in Old St. John's Church

JUNE MONTH IS NOT YET COMPLETE OF ITS BRIDAL NUMBER, for on the morrow Elinor De Wolfe Jackson and Augustus Flagg Doty exchange the solemn vows that make them man and wife in the little St. John's Church of Beverly Farms. But at the prenuptials tonight, given them by Mr. and Mrs. Everett Morss of The Rocks at West Manchester at dinner and by Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner H. Fiske (Constance Morss) at dance, the bridal pair and their attendants will make merry for hours and hours, to the syncopated strains of feet-stirring music. IV der covers will be set for only twenty, but ten times that number, jubilant and gorgeously gowned, will arrive for the dance.

WHITE ORCHIDS, LILIES OF THE VALLEY AND WHITE sweet peas in a sheaf, will the lovely Elinor carry to the altar, her billowy tulle veil lending a peacock line to her stately carriage. A lancon lace head band studded with pearls will be caught around the head with real orange blossoms. Of lancon lace, too, is her bridal gown, a thing of rare and exquisite beauty. And by startling contrast her three attendants will be garbed in pale yellow chiffon, the picture completed with floppy lechorn hats of yellow and tulle bows to carry out the symphony of color. Yellow tea roses and larkspur in bouquets will be carried by them. The bride's mother, Mrs. James Marah Jackson, will wear a chiffon dress of powder blue and a hat of violet.

FROM THE WILLOW BROOK COTTAGE, THE MRS. NATHANIEL S. SIMPKINS' estate which the Jackson family has taken for the summer, will Miss Elinor take her leave. Her husband-to-be is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George H. Doty (Lucy Flagg) of Trapelo Farm in Waltham, an ancestral family home for four generations. Into this historic and traditional abode will young Doty take his bride to live. Mrs. Nathan C. Shivevick (Mary J. Proctor) of Ipswich and New York is her matron of honor. Miss Elinor is to be attended also by Mrs. John Simpkins of the Farms and Miss Audrey Houghton of Corning, New York. John Remick of Weston has been selected as best man and the ushers include Ross Whistler, Gardiner Fiske and Hancock Dorr, all of Boston; William Howe and Alexander Winsor of Weston, Robert Ferguson of Cumberland Island, Georgia, and Edward Townsend of Oyster Bay, New York.

AND FORSAKING THE CITY TODAY WERE THE THREE Porter girls, Mary O., Frances R. and Mrs. William S. Parker (Elizabeth B. Porter), bound for Campobello, New Brunswick, and three months of the great out of doors. A small, but exclusive, colony holds forth at this island, only 16 cottages comprising its habitation. The Gorham Hubbards and their daughter, Elizabeth, of Beacon st., left some time ago, as did Mrs. Charles C. Peabody of Cambridge. No regulated social program do these elite follow, but simply the call of the wilds and the simplicity of nature's gifts. Picnicking is a favorite sport, as is tramping the woods and boating. These smart people lead a daytime life of healthy joy with very few nocturnal entertainments.

IN WHITE SATIN GOWN, WITH LACE WORN BY HER MOTHER and her great-grandmother, was the slender Clarissa Endicott Wolcott wed to Henry Hill Collins, 3d, of Philadelphia, in Emmanuel Church. Society in large numbers crowded the edifice to see the august Roger Wolcott give his daughter in marriage. Her bouquet was of lilies of the valley and forget-me-nots. Corn colored chiffon dresses and leghorn helms with shirred tulle crowns outfitted the bridesmaids. Miss Anna Cadwalder Roberts, as maid of honor, wore lavender chiffon and they all carried huge bunches of larkspur with green moire ribbons floating to the hem of the dresses. Flowered chiffons of the prevailing mode, long-draped affairs to the ground, were worn by most of the younger guests. I saw the lovely Dorothea Frothingham, in simple sky-blue dress and tan hat, was present. A startling figure was Olga Monks in cerise chiffon, ground-length and large black hat, turned away from her face. A set of gold jewelry for neck and ears gave her a decided foreign dash. She attended with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. George Howard Monks.

Mrs. Roger Wolcott — Roger Wolcott

Mrs. Harold Coolidge — Mrs. George Howard Monks — Miss Olga Monks — Dr. George Howard Monks

Notable guests attended the wedding of Clarissa Endicott Wolcott and Henry Hill Collins, 3d, at Emmanuel Church.

MRS. HAROLD COOLIDGE, IN FLOWERED CHIFFON, LEFT the church with the Monks. Mrs. Curtis Guild, in white, is so regal in stature that her presence ever lends a notable atmosphere. She arrived with her sister, Mrs. John Lavell. I saw, too, the lithe Junior Leaguers, Elinor Drinkwater and Margaret Watson, Mrs. Roger Wolcott, the bride's paternal grandmother, in black and white chiffon, left with her son. Of the out of town guests there were Mrs. Bayard Henry and Miss Katherine Robeson, the bridegroom's aunts, Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Collins, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Perry, all of Philadelphia.

PRINCE CYRIL INVOLVED IN BIG FRAUD

Berlin, June 28 (INS) Prince Cyril of Bulgaria, 24, presumptive heir to the throne of that country, has become involved in financial difficulties that have led to charges of fraud being lodged against the managers of his estates.

Police of Berlin, Prague and Vienna now are investigating financial transactions running into millions of marks, that were made in the name of the Prince.

The fraud charges arose when numerous bank drafts made out in the name of the Prince and totaling approximately $1,000,000 remained unpaid when due.

These drafts were placed with banks and individual firms, which were shown an allegedly forged balance statement of the Prince's fortune. They also were told, it is said, that the Prince was going to America shortly to get himself a rich American heiress as a bride.

Prince Cyril's need for money was explained by the fact that his father, former Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria, kept his allowance very tight and allowed no mortgages to be taken out on the Prince's estates.

The car, designed by Louis coatalen for a speed "well in excess of 280 miles an hour," estimated maximum of Seagrave's Golden Arrow, will be built at Wolverhampton and cost $125,000.

NAB BARTENDER IN CANAL ZONE

Panama, June 28 (AP)—The first arrest of a bartender for selling liquor on a vessel passing through the Panama Canal Zone has been made here.

The man arrested was Georgio Imperiale, first class bartender of the Italian liner Virgilio, from Valparaiso and South American west coast ports for Genoa.

Capt. Domulo Chiesa, the ship's master, also was arrested, being held responsible for the conduct of his subordinate. The bartender was released under a small bond and will be tried by the federal district court of the Canal Zone on a date to be fixed.

It was Capt. Chiesa's first trip and he declared he did not know he was violating the law by keeping his bar open in Canal Zone waters. Port officials said boarding officers always explain the situation to the masters of vessels calling here for the first time and a record is kept of such warning.

Mrs. Fairbanks' No. 3 Is Only 28

New York, June 28 (AP)—Mrs. Beth Fairbanks, former wife of Douglas Fairbanks, who was married yesterday to Jack Whiting, musical comedy actor, is 40 years old, her husband 28. Three weeks ago Mrs. Whiting attended the wedding of her son, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., to Joan Crawford. Since then both she and Mr. Whiting denied that they planned to wed.

Beth Sully and Douglas Fairbanks were married at Watch Hill, R. I., in July, 1907. They were divorced in White Plains, N. Y., November 20, 1918. Mrs. Fairbanks later married James Evans, Jr., a Pittsburgh broker. A divorce ended that marriage.

POWER DISPUTE SETTLED

Holyoke, June 28—An agreement has been reached between the Holyoke Water Power Co. and the municipal gas and electric department of the city of Holyoke that will put an end to wrangling that has existed for some years.

The Water Power Co. agreed to a number of privileges, and not to question the right of the city department to distribute electrical energy from the Hadley Thread plant, so-called.

It was agreed that the Water Power Co. can sell to concerns who use not less than 100 horsepower of energy, electricity for conversion into electrical lighting, but that not over 15 per cent of the amount purchased shall be so converted.

On the adoption of these agreements the department will not object to the dismissal of a suit brought by the department against the Water Power Co.

Clue to Missing Amherst Student

North Adams, June 28—Frederick McCann, Amherst College sophomore, missing since May 3, may have received a hair cut and shave and inquired the way to Keene, N. H., at the Hotel Wellington barber shop here. George A. Durant, the proprietor, reported to local police that a young man answering closely the description of the missing student was a customer about 8 in the morning. Durant said that the youth on whom he worked had a slight scar on the back of his neck.

EUROPE QUOTA CUTS IN EFFECT NEXT MONDAY

Washington, June 28. A new system of determining permissible immigration into the United States, particularly European immigration, will go into operation around the borders of the United States next Monday.

That is the date for the national origins amendment to the old law successfully maintained by its supporters in the Senate over the objection of President Hoover to become effective.

The scheme, devised in an attempt to proportion European immigration in accordance with the present racial character of the American population, will cut down the total of European immigration materially, and bring about sharp changes in the quotas of various nations. It will not, however, affect immigration from Canada and Mexico, now the largest sources of new population aside from the natural birthrate.

METHODS UNCHANGED

"So far as the administration service goes, the new law will require no change of methods, no increase of personnel and no difficulties we can at present see," Carl Peha White, assistant secretary of labor, says. "All the determinations for its enforcement have been made, and the change from the present quota system to the national origins plane will pass unnoticed in our daily work."

Under the new system, about 150,000 immigrants will be admitted annually from Europe, compared with about 164,000 under the old quota basis. England and northern Ireland, which this year were followed 34,007 immigrants to the United States, will be permitted a total of 65,721 annually after July 1, or something like 44 per cent of the year's immigration from Europe.

Germany will be allowed 25,957 immigrants instead of 51,227; Irish Free State, 17,853 instead of 28,567; Sweden, 3314, against 9561; Norway, 2377, against 6453; Poland, 6542, against 5982; Belgium, 1304, against 512, and Italy, 5802, against 3845. Most of the other nations will be held to the arbitrary minimum allowance of 100 a year.

QUOTAS FILLED FAR AHEAD

Immigration service officials expect the large increase in allotment to Great Britain to be fully used. Under the existing quota system, applications for passports by intending British immigrants have so far exceeded the allotment that they have been granted for two years ahead. The increase awarded to Italy under the new system also will be quickly filled up.

Aside from the reduction in German and Irish Free State immigration, the next greatest change will affect the three Scandinavian nations which will furnish only between a third and a half as many new citizens in the future as they have in the past.

The right to enter the United States is now being successfully determined for nearly all immigrants in their home countries before they embark, and few are subjected to the hardships of making the voyage only to learn that they may not enter. That is one reason for the official anticipation that no trouble will arise in American ports next week as the new law is applied.

DELANO TO PAY BACK THEFTS

Brockton, June 28. Amos C. Delano, former member of the Marion board of selectmen and a well-known Cape real estate operator, in superior court here pleaded guilty to two indictments charging larceny. His cases were put over for disposition until the October term of court.

The thefts, it is claimed, amount to close to $2500. Delano made restitution of $1500 and his plea that his cases go over until October was granted with the understanding that he make good the remainder of the money by then. The police allege that he obtained $965 from Manuel Augustus of Marion on a promise to effect the release of the latter's son from Concord Reformatory. The younger Augustus still remains in the reformatory.

Delano is also charged with the theft of $1000, the balance on a sale of property owned by Mr. George Delano, who is no relation to the defendant. The sale price was $4200, it is said. Mrs. Delano received $1200 of the restitution money given today by Delano and $300 went to Augustus.

FIRE MARSHAL BANS CARBIDE SALE FOR 4TH

State Fire Marshal George C. Neal has banned the use of carbide guns as Fourth of July noisemakers. To strengthen his order the fire marshal told a committee of fireworks men that anyone selling guns or carbide ammunition for the holiday observance would be severely dealt with.

"Twenty years ago there were 16 deaths in Massachusetts resulting from fireworks on the Fourth of July," Marshal Neal asserted. "The next year the safe and sane Fourth legislation was passed and but a single death resulted. The property damage, prior to 1910, was enormous each year.

"Now, through the use of calcium carbide and aluminum dust and other explosives not containing gun powder, they are trying to undo the good results we have obtained for 19 years."

To a committee of fireworks men he declared that he would listen to no pleas to allow the sale of these forbidden explosives. "I am sorry if you are heavily stocked with these things, but the law says you cannot sell them, and the loss of life caused by carbide fumes or aluminum dust accidents would be greater to contemplate than the loss of money through stocking dangerous explosives."

FIRE MARSHAL ALLEN TO NAME STATE EDISON CONTESTANT

Governor Allen late today is expected to announce the name of the principal candidate as well as an alternate, chosen from 15 selected boys from all parts of the state, to represent Massachusetts in the Thomas A. Edison scholarship contest.

The 15 boys assemble early today at the State Department of Education rooms where they are being interviewed by the general committee. The general committee was created after the Governor had directed the department to conduct the contest.

The committee consists of Frank P. Morse, supervisor of elementary education, department of education; Dr. Roscoe W. Thatcher, president of the Massachusetts Agricultural college; Harry E. Marsh, principal of the Springfield Technical High school; William B. Snow, assistant superintendent of schools in Boston, and Dr. Alfred E. Stearns, principal of Phillips Andover Academy, Andover.

The boys and the committee will be greeted by the Governor during the course of the day.

WHERE DID ALL THE ANTIQUES COME FROM? Is there any real supply of genuine old furniture and bric-a-brac? Will the fad for these articles last? Robert W. DeForest has interesting things to say about collections and collectors in next Sunday's Boston Advertiser.

SHOE UNIONS START DRIVE IN HAVERHILL

Haverhill, June 28—The Shoe Workers' Protective Union, through its joint district council, inaugurated a crusade to unionize all the shoe factories in this city and vicinity 100 per cent.

The district council is issuing these instructions to the business agents, also announced that three shoe firms that have moved out of Haverhill since the union demanded a five-day week and 10 per cent increase in wages a month ago have been placed on the unfair list of the S. W. P. U., because the firms refused to sign the new agreements.

In this connection, members of the union hereafter will be prohibited from accepting positions with firms leaving this city, under penalty of expulsion. This latter has been permitted in the past, it being estimated that there are now fully 500 shoe workers who maintain their homes here, but work for firms in nearby places.

Union officials admitted that there are 25 small firms maintained as open shops where 200 union members are employed.

These firms pay union wages and have not in the past been troubled, but they now come under the union ban.

Two more factories became involved over the demands of the union, making 28 which have refused to sign up.

These 28 firms employ about 6000 and of that number fully 4000 were called out on strike, the other 2000 having been thrown out of work before the union presented its new agreements by their factories being shut down.

The women stitchers local has voted $5000 as strike benefits for their 2000 members. This money is to be distributed only to needy members.

The S. W. P. U. and the Shoe Manufacturers' Association, which have twice attempted to negotiate a collective agreement covering 28 shoe firms, are still at a deadlock, and both sides have begun to prepare for a protracted fight over the union's demands.

BOSTON GIRL AT ROYAL COURT

London, June 28—The final Royal Court of the season was held in a blaze of crimson and golden splendor at Buckingham Palace. Once again there were American young women to make the bow to Queen Mary and again the new American ambassador, General Charles G. Dawes, appeared in simple American evening dress in preference to the silk breeches of court etiquet.

There were eight American women received. They were the Misses Annie E. Nourse of Boston, Mary E. Riddle of Tennessee, Elizabeth Stuart of Cambridge, Mass., and Mistresses Ernest Dorbritz of Philadelphia, Walter Mangum of South Carolina, Francis Neilson of Chicago, John B. Seymour of Georgia, and Andrew Wheeler of Philadelphia.

Pan-Presbyterian Council Adjourns

The 13th quadrennial council of the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance, which has been attended by delegates from all over the world, ended at the First Presbyterian Church with devotional exercises, a valedictory by the retiring president, the Rev. Dr. Charles Merle-d'Aubigne of France, and an introductory speech by the Rev. Dr. George W. Richards of Lancaster, Pa., president-elect.

Reports of various comittees were heard during a brief business session. The next quadrennial meeting of the council will be held in Belfast, Ire., in 1933. The officers and delegates of the alliance thanked the members of the parish of the First Presbyterian Church for the cordial welcome and treatment during the visit here.

Among the churches returned to the clergy were the Basilica of Guadalupe, the Church of Our Professor, and the Sacred Family Church.

The stretch, which has long vexed motorists on the turnpike, has until recently been under the superintendence and maintenance of the Malden board of public works, but a bill was passed providing for construction by the state.

Champion Loop Flier Banned by Parker

"For improperly operating an airplane," Col. Richard W. Mackie, champion loop-the-looper, has had his right to operate aircraft in this State suspended.

The ban has been ordered by Captain Parker, registrar of motor vehicles, because of Mackie's failure to stop his propeller after landing at the Boston airport Tuesday following the flight in which he made 631 consecutive loops. Upon landing the colonel got out of his plane to have his picture taken. There was a crowd nearby, and it is claimed that these persons were endangered by the spinning propeller.

Colonel Mackie served a long time as an air mail pilot on the Boston to New York line under a federal license. He never had a Massachusetts license.

LONDON VISIT CELEBRATED BY ANCIENTS

The 33d anniversary of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company's visit to England in 1896 was celebrated by the London Club, at a meeting and banquet at the Rockmere, Marblehead.

At the meeting which preceded the banquet, Capt. Francis Hawken Appleton, president, and Capt. Clarence J. McKenzie, secretary, were re-elected.

At the banquet, Capt. Appleton presided and the secretary read a report. The Rev. A. A. Berle, who was the chaplain on the eventful trip, spoke interestingly on "Why the Anglo Saxons should stand together."

Maj. James W. H. Myrick, the new commander, met with a warm reception from his comrades and in a brief speech told of the Ancients' aims.

The chaplain, the Rev. Arthur M. Ellis, gave his impressions of what the company was doing in fostering better relations with foreign powers.

Capt. Jacob Fottler was the oldest past commander present.

On the 1896 trip 171 members took passage on the steamship Servia, and of these only 20 are alive and of these seven were present at the dinner. They are Daniel R. Badger, Lieut. John E. Cotter, Sergt. J. Harry Hartley, Sergt. John P. Hazlett, Capt. Henry B. Lewis, Sergt. Daniel G. H. Power and Lieut. E. S. Taylor.

Of the party which visited London under command of Capt. Appleton, in 1912, quite a number were present. Capt. William N. McKenna, who is in Los Angeles, sent congratulations.

In addition to those already mentioned were Capt. George H. Hudson, Capt. Thomas H. Ratigan, Capt. James D. Coady and Capt. Edward N. West, all past commanders, Maj. William H. Hennessey, Fred Sawyer, Lieut. Paul O. Curtis, Sergt. Roscoe E. Estes and Sergt. D. B. MacLary.

Fathers Plea to Annul Son's Adoption Fails

Portland, Me., June 28—The petition of George C. Heydman of White Bear, Minn., to annul an adoption decree whereby his son, James T., 7, became the legal heir of Mr. and Mrs. Roland M. Richardson of Bridgton was denied by Judge Carroll S. Chaplin.

Heydman represented that his wife deserted him when they lived at Frankfort a year ago, taking their six children with her, and later deserted them, when the Children's Protective Society took them in charge and provided good homes for them, this one being adopted May 7.

He regained custody of five, took them West, and they now are in homes of his two sisters, he told the court, and he wished this boy restored to him and his brothers and sisters.

Alleged failure to go to the assistance of the children last year or to manifest any interest in this boy until adopted influenced the court to deny the petition.

RUNAWAY TRUCK KILLS CHILD

Three-year-old Harlam Riley of 432 West Second st., South Boston, was crushed to death by a heavy truck while he was playing on the sidewalk near his home when the driver lost control of the machine and was unable to prevent it from leaping the curbstone.

The child was rushed to the Carney Hospital, where he was pronounced dead upon arrival. Martin Nee, operator of 407 Athens st., South Boston, was locked up on a technical charge of manslaughter by Special Officers Eaton and Flannery of the Athens st. station.

WOMAN FAINTS AT JAIL TERM

Mrs. Ida Musman of Duke st., Mattapan, fainted and had to be carried from the courtroom when she was sentenced to an indefinite term at the Women's Reformatory at Sherborn, by Judge Raymond in the Suffolk Superior Court.

Mrs. Musman was found guilty several days ago of larceny of $74,000 from Hyman Lechtman of Dorchester in a worthless stock transaction.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Robert E. McGuire told the court she had caused Lechtman to put in $50,000 of his own money and borrowed more than $20,000 additional. Atty. Joseph Cavanaugh, representing Mrs. Musman, argued for probation, saying that the real amount stolen was $880. He stated he intended to take the case to the Supreme Court on exceptions.

Hall of Revere, the fund has reached a point well over $9000. The legionnaires expect to raise $60,000 in 60 days.

The city council of Revere early this year voted to sell a large plot of land fronting on Broadway near Hyde st., for the sum of $250 providing that the legion erects building there within two years and then occupy it for at least one year, after which time the legion will have complete ownership of the land.

Sentenced to Drink Ginger Ale Each Day

Springfield, June 28. In district court Judge Wallace R. Heady ordered Mrs. Waco Skarzeski to have a cold bottle of ginger ale ready for her husband every night when he returns home from work.

Skarzeski was before the court on a charge of drunkenness, to which he pleaded guilty. He told the court he usually stopped on his way home from work at an establishment near Dwight and Sharon sts., but he would not admit that he ever drank anything stronger than ginger ale and cider.

After the judge had instructed Mrs. Skarzeski to provide the ginger ale for her husband, he ordered her to report to the court her husband's failure at any time to partake of the beverage. The case was continued for a month in order to give the plan a trial.

Richmond Realtor Champion Booster

Never boost your home town in competition with a man from Richmond, Va.

The National Real Estate Association's committee of judges in conclave at the Hotel Statler was on record today as awarding to Al D. Smith, Richmond realtor, a solid silver cup in token of his proved supremacy as an advocate of the virtues of his birthplace.

Representatives of 10 principal cities of the United States spoke for five minutes in praise of their respective communities.

Richmond's defender won first place, Portland, Me., second, and Phoenix, Ariz., third.

Boston, playing host to the real estate men's convention, modestly declined to enter a spokesman in the competition.

ARREST OF VARE SHERIFF NEAR

Washington, June 28—The mandate of the Supreme Court ordering the arrest of Sheriff Thomas W. Cunningham of Philadelphia by the sergeant-at-arms of the Senate in connection with the Senate investigation of the election of William S. Vare of Pennsylvania was mailed to the clerk of the federal district court at Philadelphia.

Sergeant-at-Arms Davis S. Berry is preparing to place the sheriff under arrest early next week. Under a Senate resolution, introduced by Sen. King, Democrat, Utah, the sergeant-at-arms will be authorized to release Cunningham under bond of $1000 for his appearance before the Senate when wanted.

During the investigation of the election of Vare as United States senator, Cunningham twice appeared as a witness before the Senate committee and testified he had contributed $50,000 to the state Republican organization for campaign purposes. He refused to answer when questioned as to the source of his income. He was being paid a salary of $4000 a year as clerk of the quarter sessions court.

GIVE UP SEARCH FOR FLIERS

Madrid, June 28—The Spanish government considers it has done everything in its power to trace the missing airplane of Maj. Ramon Franco and his three companions, who disappeared last Friday after taking off on a round-trip flight from Spain to New York, and has given them up for lost.

Minister of Marine Garcia de los Reyes announced to the press that further search had been virtually abandoned as useless.

Madrid learned that searching ships had to make for port before the violence of the storms.

A Suggestion
FROM the Men who have served the HUSBANDS
of millions of wives

THERE is no secret about the making of good coffee. The secret, if you can call it such, is in the kind of coffee you buy. There is no better proof of this than the fact that the great majority of the hotels and restaurants that are famous for their coffee, all serve the same kind—La Touraine.

The most particular housewife could not be so fussy about flavor and aroma as the professional buyers who select coffee for their millions of hotel and restaurant guests . . . They choose La Touraine, not because they can buy it for a certain price, but because it has a certain quality . . . an unvaryingly full flavor and "bouquet" (as connoisseurs call it).

Show your husband that you can serve him just as good coffee at home as he gets in his favorite hotel. Start tomorrow, with La Touraine.

RUGGED SPORTS FOR BERLIN'S CELEBRATION

Berlin, N. H., June 28 Rugged sports are going to play a major part in the huge centennial celebration here from July 1 to 6. Boxing and baseball will be given a spot during the observance, but for most of those who are planning to attend, the Woodsmen's Sports Contest is the big event.

The conte t will be between Androscoggin Valley and Connecticut Valley lumberjacks and the events are all of the variety that require more than ordinary brawn and speed. Previously sports among lumberjacks have been staged in camps, far out in the woods. Bringing them into the city is something new and is creating as much interest as a bucking bronco building contest would in one of the far Western cities.

Berlin knows its lumberjacks and has some conception of how they will go when they indulge in one of their favorite sports. Included among the events scheduled are the the bateau race, log race from shore to boom with pick pole for balancing, felling of spruce trees and cutting in middle, tug of war and log rolling contest.

MUCH SKILL REQUIRED

Each of these events calls for a skill that is acquired after much practice and probably the most hazardous is log rolling. In this sport two men stand on a log is fast long out in the river, each trying to roll his opponent off. The log soon starts revolving rapidly and it requires the agility of a cat to escape a ducking.

Berlin has on its police force a champion log roller, Fred Landry, and there are many of the "Jacks" coming to the city next week who believe they can tip Fred off a log and at the same time juggle his crown to their own heads.

PAGEANT OF 1000

CENTENNIAL PARADE

Another feature will be the Centennial parade on Thursday morning. The parade will be two miles long, with 100 floats, representing fraternal orders, business houses and industrial organizations, 12 bands and drum corps, one-half mile of military display with representatives from all batteries in the State, and other salient features. There will be 1000 Legionnaires from all over the State, also a State delegation of Knights of Pythias. Col O. P. Cole is marshal. Trophies amounting to more than $1000 will be awarded for the best entries.

The Centenary Festival (Mardi Gras) which will take place on Friday promises to be unusual. Main st., from and including Green sq. to Mason st. will be roped off, and dancing will be in order with bands at each end of the festival grounds. There also will be several stages along the street for special entertainment.

Girl Who Drives Auto Minus Plates Goes On

Worcester, June 28 Two Montana girls are continuing their New England tour today, after a charge of driving an unregistered car against one of them was dismissed in court here.

Miss Loretta Ulmer, a Miles City school teacher drove 2000 miles across the country from Miles City, Mont., in an automobile without registration plates, without interference from traffic officers, and then ran afoul of State Trooper Everett J. Hall in Shrewsbury.

Judge Samuel Utley placed the case on file, and permitted the young woman and her chum, Miss Ina May Brayton, another Miles City teacher, to continue on their tour.

Although Miss Brayton was not under arrest she insisted on remaining with Miss Ulmer and they passed the night together in the police matron's room at headquarters.

Miss Ulmer explained to Judge Utley that she and her chum had decided rather hurriedly that they would pass their summer vacation in an automobile tour of the eastern part of the country. She bought a new machine and they started East. They arranged to have plates forwarded by the Montana registry officials to a point in North Dakota, but the plates had not arrived at the point when they did, and they continued on their way across the country.

Judge Cuts Award for Care of Woman

Worcester, June 28- Judge Philip J. O'Connell, in Superior Court, ordered a cut of $700.87 in a verdict returned last week by a jury awarding $1774.87 to Harold S. Hopkins of Upton against the estate of Ellen A. Rawson of Upton.

Mr. Hopkins sued to recover about $1800 which he claimed was due him under an agreement he made with Ellen A. Rawson, by which he was to live with her and care for her and her property in consideration of receiving the property at her death. When she died she had made no provision that he should receive the property.

Thirsty Man's Haste Ends in Auto Wreck

St Albans, Vt., June 27 Timothy Cooney of Glens Falls, N. Y., became impatient of the delay while his two companions registered at the United States Customs office at Swanton and returned from the back seat of the sedan to the controls. A few minutes later he crawled from the badly damaged sedan which had left the road and overturned after hitting a tree near Blanch's Corner. He plead guilty to a charge of operating a car while under the influence of liquor before Judge M. H. Alexander.

Clubs Favor Musical Instruction

THE increased musical instruction of children has brought the United States rapidly to world leadership in music

And with this development and successful program, the General Federation of Women's Clubs has had an impressive and important connection

This, because the two and a half million clubwomen of the country have answered the summons of Miss Gertrude A. Null of Huron, South Dakota, chairman of the music loan libraries division of the Federation work, and visited the public schools, seeing for themselves the amount and quality of music instruction supplied in their own communities

"Adult literacy, in the mother-tongue, has become almost universal since the Civil War," Miss Null points out. "The oncoming generation will be able to boast almost no musical illiteracy, and, doubtless, this great advantage will be a militant factor in bringing about world sympathies and understanding

"Through the children, America is hastening on toward the fulfillment of our fondest hopes for music in the new world No one can really estimate the vast bearing this education among children has already had in placing our country foremost in the musical world"

Miss Gertrude A. Null

Music loan libraries, an important phase of Federation work, has shown considerable progress and is constantly growing demand by the federated clubs of the nation

The programs of Edward MacDowell music are the most popular with clubwomen, Miss Null said, and the music of the American Indians is a close second.

A series of programs based on future for the artistic life of the Southwest as indicated by its increasing demand for the best available in musical education.

ART ASSOCIATION

This art group of Old Lyme, Ct will set aside August 10, during their August exhibition as the day on which artists will meet officers and members of the General Federation in the beautiful association galleries at Old Lyme. The exhibition, an annual event, has come to be of international importance and people from all over the world come to view the pictures

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL WOMEN'S CLUBS

At the national convention which opens at Mackinac Island, Michigan, July 8, Bessie Q. Mott, of New York City, well known writer on finance for women, will deliver an address, 'Women and Her Money," giving advice on investments.

Congresswomen Ruth Hanna McCormack, whose announcement of her candidacy for the United States Senate gives rise to the speculation that she will probably be the first woman to wear the senatorial toga, will also be a speaker at the tenth annual convention of the Federation.

INCOME TAX FOR RUM WAR IS ATTACKED

The employment of any share of the revenue collected in federal income tax for the purposes of enforcing prohibition, and causing the destruction of innocent lives at the hands of enforcement officers, was denounced today by a prominent Boston theatrical man who has joined the ranks of Boston Evening American readers demanding reduction in the tax on earned income.

Vernon Gray, manager of the Metropolitan Theater of Boston, today emphasized the resentment which thousands of citizens feel over the workings of the federal income tax regulations.

"One of the most obnoxious features of the income tax is the fact that a great deal of the money collected is used in the enforcement of prohibition, a law with which millions have not the slightest sympathy," he said.

"The army and navy, which are necessary features of our national existence, have the greatest difficulty getting sufficient appropriations from Congress for their proper maintenance. I spent several years in the navy, and I know how the department heads quake in their boots every four years, fearing lest Congress destroy or nullify their work by refusing adequate appropriations.

"I am not for war, but I feel that it is our national duty to maintain an efficient navy and an efficient army. There is serious question as to the value of national prohibition, and I strongly resent being obliged to pay an income tax for the enforcement of this law, when I know how niggardly the government can be with the two great arms of the service. In a time of national peril, it is the army and the navy which will protect us, not the Eighteenth Amendment or the Volstead act.

"The Boston Evening American is doing a splendid piece of work in arousing the public to the possibility of obtaining fair treatment at the hands of Congress in the matter of taxation upon earned income. I am sure that the movement will meet with success."

No Women Allowed Sign 'Protects' Stag Party

Milford, N. H., June 28—"No Women Allowed Here" was the sign tacked to the door of the James Casey house at 22 Union st., here. The notice, startling as it may seem, only denoted that a little "stag" party was being given by Milford firemen to a brother fire laddie, John J. Casey, who will marry Miss Winifred May Watts at Enfield, N. H., next Monday.

SOLE GUILT FOR WAR DENIED BY GERMANY

Berlin, June 28—A government manifesto, denying absolutely that Germany bears "sole guilt" for the World War and signed by President Paul von Hindenburg and members of the Cabinet, was issued in connection with the 10th anniversary of the signing of the Versailles peace treaty.

The manifesto condemned terms of the Versailles treaty and was made public in connection with the great demonstrations against the "war guilt lie" planned in various German cities for the anniversary observance today.

The official communique says: "Germany signed the treaty without admitting that she was the sole author of the war. This charge is a source of constant irritation among our people and prevents confidence between nations.

"We are confident that the whole nation agrees with us in repudiating the charge of Germany's war guilt and in hoping that the future belongs to a conception of peace not dictated by force, but based on the unanimous and honest conviction of a free people having equal rights."

The demonstrations today are directed at two points, both in the Versailles treaty—repudiation of the placing of "sole guilt" for the World War on Germany and withdrawal of some 60,000 foreign troops from the Rhine valley.

Mr. Warner's name was presented at the airship session by A. J. Brafe of Cleveland, chairman of the nominating committee.

WILL RADIO BE OPERA SINGERS' VALHALLA

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

DESPITE the universal hosannas of radio enthusiasts, there seems as though the persons who try to keep the world informed of studio doings frequently miss the most interesting happenings. This thought occurs as a result of a little thrill of the unexpected. It came during a casual listening to a Columbia feature last night. The announcer remarked, "This is Basil Rusdaci announcing."

TWO GIANTS

THOSE WORDS were simple enough, and the ran in the conventional channel. But they started a current of reflections and memories. I recalled the Metropolitan Opera House soon to disappear. Most particularly they brought back many memories of a series of performances of the Wagner Ring cycle, given there 16 years ago. It might have been 17 or 18 years gone by. Anyhow, I saw once more the Rhine Maidens and Mime and the two Gunthers. Basil Rusdael was one of the giants. I forget whether he was the one who got himself slain by the other. I do know, though, that his voice was a deep, rich bass and his figure was tall and majestic. A few days ago I saw him in a talkie.

PROSAIC DECREPITUDE

IS THIS the future of grand opera singers? Are Hans Sachs and Floria Tosca going to end up their days in harness, giving the remnants of once glorious voices to the demands of character parts in front of camera and microphone? Is Siegfried to be kept out of Valhalla when he reaches life's glorious climax, to be gradually moulded into prosaic decrepitude in the all-revealing glare of screen and loud-speaker?

MEMORIES WERE ENOUGH

BEFORE THE ARRIVAL of this age of efficiency and abolition of waste, there was romance in a lost career. It might be the romance of poverty after affluence or it might be the romance of pleasant ease derived from rapidly acquired success. But at least there was a gentle recognition that the heyday was past. Life filled with memories was sufficient.

LIVING A SISTER'S CAREER

I KNOW two old ladies who have lived for 40 years on the memory of their sister who was once a famous singer. They are living in comfortable wealth, but their money means nothing to them. They live in the past, the past of their wonderful sister. Nothing can draw them out of their shell of remembrance except an operatic broadcast. Their ears are losing their sharp perception. Nowadays they are disposed to draw rather depressing comparisons between the amateurish warblings of pretty little Jennie Jones and the remembered sonorities of Malibran. But for them the past has been something perfect in life. A loved one who personified the ambitions of all three, who achieved their triple goal, and who stopped before success could fritter itself away. Plot, denouement, climax, finish.

THE WORLD ALWAYS RIGHT

THE BROADCASTED WORLD will say that radio and the talkies need the elements which are found in those persons who have known success. It will say that the best announcer is a man who has known how to sing and who has a wide knowledge of musical expressions. It will say that the human voice in the most persistent and lasting of body's functions. It will say that previous achievement gives assurance, poise, balance, to counteract the more disturbing vivacity of spot-lit youth. As usual, the world will be right.

Television Produces Colors in Test

New York, June 28 The third step in the development and perfection of television was demonstrated for the first time at the Bell Telephone laboratories, Newspapermen perked into a tiny aperture half the size of an ordinary keyhole, and watched flickering images of highly colored objects dance before their eyes.

A colored picture of Al Jolson was held before the bridge glare of a flickering blue light at the other end of the room. Jolson was in the act of singing "Sonny Boy."

Following this a reproduction of a watermelon, an American flag, a colored ball and a geranium were seen. Then figuratively speaking, the stage was cleared and a young girl, Miss Charlotte Papillon mounted a high stool before the dancing blue light. Her every movement from a white-toothed smile to an alluring wink, was clearly visible.

The girl whose image was transmitted in this case was scanned by a bright beam of blue light while being observed by the same time by three sets of electrical eyes, or photo-electric cells, each set arranged so as to transmit current corresponding to the amount of a primary color. At the receiving apparatus three tubes formed images similar in brightness and color to what had been seen by the sets of electrical eyes.

RIFLE TRIALS START AUG. 10

The national rifle matches will be held at Camp Perry, O., from August 25 to September 15, inclusive. Tryouts for the Massachusetts team will be held from time to time, and dates for these will be sent to men who signify their intention of trying for the team. The final trials will be held at the Wakefield matches, United Services of New England, August 10 to 18, inclusive.

Jesse O. Norcross of 33 Elm st, Worcester, captain of the Massachusetts civilian team, will be at Wakefield during the entire shoot and will be glad to give assistance to some of the club shoots where candidates for the team are competing. If the club secretaries will inform him of the dates and places.

Louis Aronson was elected commander of the All-Dorchester Post, American Legion, at its annual elections, held in the Dorchester municipal building.

TRANSFUSION FAILS; BOY DIES

Newburyport, June 28 An operation for the removal of his tonsils proved fatal to Robert A. Chase, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Chase, 251 High st, member of the class of 1930, Dartmouth College. He died in Anna Jaques Hospital. A transfusion of blood, given by a fellow student at Dartmouth, Elliott Noyes of this city, proved unsuccessful.

Chase was a member of Central Congregational Church and a graduate of Newburyport high school. He is survived by his parents, two sisters, Dorothy M. and Alice M. Chase, and two brothers, Fred W., Jr., and John M. Chase.

City Laborers Go Under Civil Service

Springfield, June 28—Laborers in the employ of the City of Springfield will be placed under Civil Service rules, which will go into effect shortly. This announcement was made at a conference at City Hall between Commissioner Elliot W. Goodwin, Secretary John C. Gilbert, Mayor Fordis C. Parker and heads of all departments employing common laborers. Springfield's as a city of more than 150,000 population, is obliged to adopt Civil Service rules with respect to laborers the attorney general has ruled.

BORAH NOTES LIKE MAGIC IN RUSSIA

Washington, June 28 (AP)—Americans traveling in Russia on business, scientific or other missions have found that letters written for them by Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, are of almost inestimable value in facilitating their movements in the Soviet union.

Some travelers have described such letters as "magic wands," opening to them doors from which even the nationals of other countries having diplomatic relations with Russia are barred and obtaining privileges first refused upon the presentation of passports issued by Russian diplomats in Paris, Berlin and other European capitals.

BIG DEMAND FOR LETTERS.

Word of the potency of the signature "Wm. E. Borah," has traveled far and wide with a result that the Idaho senator receives almost daily requests for such documents.

These come not only direct from business men and scientists, but from senators and members of the House of Representatives in behalf of constituents, with one from William Howard Taft, chief justice of the United States.

During May and the forepart of this month, Senator Borah issued from one to three letters a day. These are addressed merely "to whom this letter may be presented." They are issued only to persons known personally to the senator or vouched for by a personal acquaintance.

SOME AMUSING CASES.

People of prominence for whom the Senator has written similar letters include Dr. William J. Morden of the American Museum of Natural History; George Sylvester Viereck, New York publisher; Dr. Edward A. Waters of the University of Pennsylvania; John A. Pearson of Tacoma, Wash.; Richard J. Hunt of Logansport, Ind., and J. H. Fitzpatrick of New Orleans.

Some of those returning from Russia have given various accounts of their use of the Borah documents, some amusing, some interesting and some bordering on the dramatic. They have served to release scientists after arrest and have opened doors for tourists who had almost despaired of getting their baggage through.

BETTER THAN PASSPORT.

One bearer of a Borah letter reported that he entered the country with a passport, had difficulties and was given an unlimited permit after producing a letter from Senator Borah.

One American who went to Paris to obtain a passport from the Russian ambassador there was repeatedly put off and finally concluded to show his letter from Senator Borah. A passport was issued immediately. On leaving the American forgot his letter and returned to the embassy for it.

"Yes, you had better take that with you," the ambassador was quoted as saying. "That is worth a good deal more to you than any papers I may issue."

False Alarm of "Looper" Sounded

The cry of "looper, looper," caused residents of Bunker Hill st., Charlestown, to turn out in force with the expectation of seeing another demonstration of the diversity peculiar to some youths of that district—boys speeding wildly through the streets in stolen automobiles.

But it was a false alarm. The cause of all the excitement was two hired automobiles filled with boys which roared over Bunker Hill st at better than 40 miles an hour. They were overhauled by a motorcycle policeman, however, before they had proceeded any great distance, who took the names of the operators. They will probably be haled into court for speeding, police said.

Plane Becomes Funeral Pyre for Young Flyer

Attaches at Roosevelt Field, N. Y., are shown attempting to extinguish flaming wreckage of the airplane in which Francis Phillips, son of the late New York sewer pipe king, John M. Phillips, was burned to death. His companion, Henry Goldsmith, student flier of Freeport, N. Y., was critically injured. The plane burst into flames after crashing in a misjudged landing and in a short time was in ashes. (A. P. Photo)

MILE A MINUTE ESCAPE FAILS

Frank Conroy, 24, of C st., South Boston, arrested after a chase through the South End, and a battle with policemen is held as a suspicious person. A charge of larceny of an automobile will be preferred today, police say.

Patrolman Dennis Riordan reported that he saw Conroy passing Columbus ave. and West Newton st., in a car that had been reported stolen from Bertha Taylor of 14 Garden st., Cambridge. Riordan gave chase in a commandeered automobile.

Traveling at a mile a minute clip, according to police, they nearly ran down Patrolmen William J. Dooley at Shawmut ave. and West Newton st. At the Lower st. bridge the driver abandoned the car and attempted to escape on the tracks under the bridge. He grappled with Riordan, who at gunpoint, ordered him to stop. The man was overpowered when Patrolman Dooley arrived. Riordan suffered a severe injury to his right leg in the battle.

DOROTHY IS WINNER IN CLASS I

Elmer Pynes' "Dorothy" scored a nine second victory of Frank Hurley's "Louise" when the Class "L" 18-footers, the oldest racing class in Dorchester bay, opened the championship season off the South Boston Yacht Club in the first series for the Commodore Eazar cup.

After leading at all the marks the "Louise" nosed into a pocket off Thompson's Island, and the "Dorothy" came home a winner in one of the prettiest naval engagements in the bay.

Five "L" were sent over an 8½-mile course and at the finish of the twilight race, darkness was settling. From the line off the coast guard life saving station the 18-footers had a short run to Pinkham's ledge, a splendid thrash down the West Way to the mark off the southwest end of Spectacle Island, a run back to the fairway buoy off the City Point pier, an other to Spectacle Island, and home.

The Ponitwo got the start at the weather end with Skipper Pyne and his Dorothy getting under way from the leeward end, his favorite position in a down-the-wind start. Only the Dorothy and the Ponitwo used spinnakers on the short slide with George Reir at the helm of the Louise, first at Pinkham's ledge and Dorothy second at the turn.

The light south southeast breze was streaky on the first round and the squadron hauled on to the wind for the thresh to Spectacle island, wind hunting expeditions were in order. The Mackintosh brothers in the Opeechee tried a hitch toward Thompson a island but were checkmated.

The race summary:

CLASS "L" MARCONI

Distance, 8½ miles.	Elapsed time
Boat and owner.	H. m. s.
Dorothy, Elmer Pyne	1 10 47
Louise, Frank Hurley	1 10 56

MILK FAMINE IN VERMONT SEEN

Montpelier, Vt., June 28—Representatives of the recently formed $10,000,000 Vermont Dairies, Inc., predicted here a more severe milk shortage than any experienced for some time past. Many farmers, they said, had discontinued feeding grain to their cows, causing production to drop below last year's level. The farmers complained of low prices for milk which made the expense of buying grain too great.

The corporation formed early this week, represents 6000 dairymen owning 100,000 cows with a combined annual production exceeding $10,000,000. The purpose of the association is to establish the market and provide an adequate supply of milk at all times.

Cops, Prisoner Hurt in "Paddy" Crash

The patrol wagon of the Newton police department, driven by Officer Cullen, and a half-ton truck of the Ferguson Marble Co., Brookline, collided at the intersection of Washington st. and Commonwealth ave., in Newton. Officer Cullen and Patrolmen Dowling and Kilmain were taking Salvatore Iarmello, 36, of 38 Cherry st. to the police station on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon when the accident occurred. The three policemen and John R. Kilham of 43 Linden st., Brookline, the driver of the truck, were all injured, none of them seriously.

Attleboro, June 28—Two Revere boys who took a long ride in an automobile, they did not own, were taken back to their home city this afternoon by police officers.

The boys, Ralph Mastromarino, 16, of 855 Broadway, and Bruno Bompane, 16, of 230 Revere st., were captured by Patrolmen Eugene Lacroix near Briggs Corner, in the outskirts of the city.

They were driving an automobile registered to Frank R. Gregorian of 35 Michigan ave., Lynn, taken at Revere Beach last night.

EACH ACCUSES OTHER IN COURT FIGHT FOR SON

What Has Gone Before

Nancy Hollenbeck, young and beautiful, pursued by Mat Tulley, is warned by her mother not to wed a poor man. Nancy follows her mother's advice and turns Mat down.

She yearns for the pretty things that the girls of wealth possess. She makes up her mind to catch Jack Beamer, rich but married. That word, married, does not trouble Nancy. He can give her what she wants. Nancy walks in the grove with Beamer, who is infatuated. Mat and sister Louise, searching for Nancy and Beamer, find the two hugging and kissing 'neath the trees.

Nancy gets in at 3 a. m. Louise accuses Nancy and asks her if she wants to figure in a divorce suit named by Mrs Beamer.

Nancy tells Louise that it would be easy to fall in love with Beamer, that his wife didn't love him and that a divorce might be had.

Nancy and Louise are invited to visit the Yosemite Valley by their rich aunt, Ellie Watson. Beamer phones Nancy and tells her he will ask his wife for a divorce.

(Now Go On With the Story)

CHAPTER 8

LOUISE'S eyes followed her sister's, to the man who, cigarette in hand, stood looking around the spacious lobby.

He wore the olive drab uniform of a ranger. His boots and hat were dusty, even his impudent smiling face was dirty; but for all the dirt and fatigue he was the youngest, freshest, most virile creature in the room. From his sun-burnt blond hair to the tips of his old riding boots, he sparkled. His bright blue eyes twinkled; white teeth, under the stubby toothbrush moustache, flashed as he encompassed the place in an all-enveloping, supremely good-natured grin. Then, with a friendly wave for a passing bellhop, he turned suddenly and went out, banging the door energetically behind him.

Nancy whistled. "The first real man I've seen. And it's leaving."

Lou smiled understandingly. Nancy was incorrigible—the dumps over one man one minute, and up on her toes for another the next. Still, it was a good sign. Maybe she would forget Jack Beamer and her wild ideas of marrying him after he got his divorce, if she got interested in somebody else. "Oh, he'll be back. Those rangers are so and out all the time. And he is attractive. I'd like to know him myself, honestly I would!" she said.

"I saw him first!" Nancy laughed. The old bubbling, lilting laugh, and her eyes widened and darkened with excitement. "Now I'm going to find out all about him. Watch me. By tomorrow we'll be intimate friends!"

Tomorrow came and went without any sign of him, but Nancy didn't give up hope. She had found out that his name was Roger Decatur, that he was "in and out"

WOMAN DENIES RUM PARTY IN COTTAGE

Says Husband Is Friendly With Other Woman; Divorce Suit Pending

Counsel for both sides were marking time pending resumption on July 2 of a bitter legal battle for custody of a six-year-old boy, being waged by Dr Merwin K. Fox Malden dentist, and his estranged wife, Edna A. Fox of Quincy.

In the first skirmish of the controversy which has four divorce actions for a background, "another woman" was brought into the case by the wife, and "another man" by the husband.

On her motion, a divorce action originally brought in the name of Mrs. Fox in which cruelty and neglect to provide were charged were dismissed when the custody hearing was opened. Atty. John D. Smith of Quincy, counsel for Mrs. Fox, made the motion.

In addition to this, three other divorce suits, all brought by Dr. Fox, have been pending. Suits brought in Norfolk county in Massachusetts and in Cumberland county, Me., have also been dismissed, leaving one action which may be tried next fall. In the action still pending it is recited that the couple were married Aug. 4, 1917. He charges that his wife deserted him at Malden June 21, 1923, and also that she committed a matrimonial offense on Sept. 4, 1926, at Billerica. The papers say there is one child, Charles Sherman Fox, born June 24, 1922.

Dr. Fox's home is at 151 Cross st., Malden and his wife is living at 600 Adams st., Quincy. The child is now in the custody of Mrs. Fox. Atty. John H. Powers of Boston is counsel for Dr. Fox.

Dr. Fox testified that he is fond of the boy, has bought him the best of clothes and the best of everything he needs, and that the child was happy at his home. He said he had practised dentistry 12 years, in Portland, Me., and in Massachusetts. Under cross examination he said he was employed by his mother.

Mrs. Fox, taken under examination by Powers, was asked if she knew Charles M. McCue, and she said she was introduced to him never or eight years ago. She said she had never been out riding alone with him, and that she last saw him a few days ago in front of a store in Quincy. She was then asked about visiting a camp in Billerica with McCue, a girl friend and another man, and said the party of four went there.

"Did you have anything to drink there?" asked Atty. Powers

"No," said Mrs. Fox. "I had a toothache and had nothing. The others drank coffee and lemonade."

Under examination by Atty. Smith her own counsel, Mrs. Fox told of a visit made by her husband and several officers to the camp early in the morning."

GIRL'S RIDE ON MOTORCYCLE HAS SAD END

Youths Fined for Fighting Over Girl Having to Walk Home From Walpole

The headstrong gag about girls walking home from automobile rides, was no joke when a Saugus youth and a Chelsea lad were arraigned and fined in Chelsea court on the charge of fighting which was an aftermath of a Chelsea girl's midnight hike.

In this case however it was a motorcycle that put the girl "on her feet" and she elected to walk home from Walpole, a distance of about 25 miles from her home. A chivalrous Walpole policeman, however, had the girl taken home in an automobile, after he found her plodding along.

Philip Irick, 19, of Sweetwater st., Saugus, was the youth accused of having abandoned the girl in Walpole. The accusation was made by Raymond Znarowski, 21, of Maverick st., Chelsea, who had introduced the girl in question to Irick.

The pair of youths were mixing it up at Broadway and Medford st., Chelsea, and were arrested. In court Znarowski told of the girl's experience. The other youth denied that he had deserted the girl and declared he had only abandoned her temporarily, to have the brakes of his motorcycle repaired. When he returned, he said, the girl had disappeared.

Judge Walsworth listened to the stories and then decided that he had no jurisdiction over the walking home episode. He fined each of the youths $10 on the charge of fighting

BROKER JAILED OVER STOCKS

Ames Nowell, 38, grandson of the late ex-Governor Ames, and who maintains residences in Brookline and Marion, Mass., was arrested in his office at 31 State st. by Police Inspectors Farrell and Haggerty on a charge of selling unlisted securities. Later he was released from the city prison on bonds of $500.

Police charge Nowell with selling to William R. Dunning of Dorchester 50 shares of American Securities Company stock at $10 a share. According to the police, Nowell is treasurer of the company, and the stock has not been approved by the Public Utilities Commission.

Blimp Augments Train Service

A Goodyear Blimp hovered over the Union Pacific train platform at San Bernardino, Cal., and picked up John W. Mapel, head of the Goodyear company, and his wife, when they alighted from an express train. They were taken to Los Angeles in the Blimp.

BITTER STRIFE IN DEDHAM OVER LOAN

Proposed School to Cost $600,000 Splits Town Into Factions

After a stormy town meeting at which charges of political trickery were openly exchanged Dedham was split into warring factions today over a month supported referendum on the question of a $600,000 school building appropriation.

There is serious campaigning under way today to secure favorable verdict, but there is also an organized movement to have the referendum declared illegal.

At a special town meeting for appropriations, held several days ago, town meeting members by a vote of 98 to eight approved the use of $600,000 for the construction of a new junior high school and for an addition to the Riverdale school.

Subsequently, a group opposed to the appropriation circulated a petition asking for a referendum on the proposed expenditure.

At the latest rowdy meeting the petition was presented. Its referendum recommendation was accepted, but only after a heated session. Opponents of the referendum asserted that the names upon the petition were improperly obtained.

FREEDOM FOR SALEM MEN IS ASKED

Former Head of U. S. Dry Forces Says State Convicted Men on Federal Evidence

A letter from former Asst. U. S. Atty. Gen. Mabel Walker Willebrandt urging clemency for three Salem men sentenced for conspiracy against the State prohibition act was referred to at a hearing before the State Pardon Board last night in Salem.

The hearing was in the case of Ruel Getchell, ex-former selectman of Salisbury, Warren S. Cheshingham, 2d, former Salisbury policeman, and Howard F. George, 3d, once a policeman and later in the ice business. Their counsel said that testimony given by them in a federal court had been used to convict them in a lower court.

There was no opposition to the pleas for executive clemency, and the Pardon Board took the matter under consideration.

Rum-Runner Jailed at Montpelier, Vt.

Montpelier, Vt., June 28—Anthony Rossi of Newport was remanded to Washington County jail when he was unable to pay a fine of $500 imposed on him following his conviction on a charge of smuggling 264 quarts of ale and 126 quarts of wine into this county.

College Star Wild, So Hartford Wins

Allentown, Penn., June 28—Hartford made it three straight wins over Allentown by taking the series' finale, 7 to 5.

Jimmy Hyman, knocked out of the box yesterday, came back to defeat the Dukes, while Kimble, former Muhlenberg College star, developed a streak of wildness in the seventh inning, when he hit two batsmen and walked two, with a single sandwiched in between, to send in three runs across the plate.

Durant Golf Is in Final Round

THE QUESTION

Do you think a uniform code of traffic laws should be ordered by the State, or that cities and towns should conduct their own?

MRS. GERTRUDE G. ANDERSON, Walden st.—It is a difficult problem for any body of men to settle satisfactorily, even in their own respective cities. Old traffic laws have been discarded many times and new ones put into effect with varying success. I think that a meeting of town and city engineers from all over the State should be held, and a decision reached by which one set of rules governing automobile traffic throughout the State would be enforced.

MRS. ANNA M. GRABERT, Malden st.—There are so many different signals for autoists to take cognizance of in driving through our towns and cities that an automobile driver becomes so confused that he cannot be blamed for violating some of them. He learns how to obey certain signals in one town only to find that by doing the same thing in another town or city he is sold up by an angry traffic officer and told he is liable to be summonsed to court. If there was a uniform set of traffic laws there would be less confusion to the GORDON J. BERRANE, Holbrook st.—The State should have control of all traffic laws. There are so many different ways of directing or misdirecting the ordinary driver of an automobile that he gets bewildered when trying his best to avoid getting into a jam in a congested street. A uniform code of State traffic laws would be a great help, I think, in lessening the fatalities or of the destruction of personal property. Nearly all operators of machines I think will agree that traffic laws should be the same everywhere in Massachusetts. Right here in Boston I have seen officers at the same traffic box give different signals.

JAMES J. HURLEY, Boylston st.—One code of traffic rules should hold good for the whole state. There are too many different sets of laws in attempting to regulate automobile traffic so as to avoid accidents. If it became known that the traffic laws were the same in every part of the state there would be fewer accidents caused by operators of automobiles being confused as to what to do. One signal means one thing in one city and something else in another. Visitors here from other states would greatly appreciate uniform traffic

PROBE 'LEAK' IN SECRET PLAN TO PROTECT COASTS BY RAIL GUNS

MENACE SEEN TO DEFENSE OF NATION

War Department Admits Proposal for $100,000,000 Mobilization in Case of Attack

Washington, June 28—Seeking the person or persons responsible for the "leak" which resulted in the publication of the War Department's secret plan for protecting U. S. coast by a $100,000,000 mobilization of railroad artillery, army officials asserted today that the national defense has been menaced by the premature baring of confidential information.

The War Department admitted that it had under consideration, purely as an emergency measure, the conversion of Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coast railroads to military purposes in case of an attack by a foreign power.

In such an event, there would be established a network of emplacements for the newly developed 14-inch railway guns, it was conceded. These guns would be available for the bombardment of a hostile fleet 30 miles at sea.

SANCTION NEEDED

The manifest impossibility of carrying out the railway gun plan without first obtaining congressional sanction, however, was stressed today by War Department officers who pointed out that the sum of $83,400,000 was appropriated for all coast defenses, both in territorial United States and in outlying possessions, during the fiscal year which begins July 1. With this sum all existing forts must be maintained, personnel paid and other necessary expenses met, leaving no surplus for even a start on such an ambitious project as the $100,000,000 railway gun emplacement project.

War department officials feared that the publicity given the hundred million dollar plan, which would not be put into effect except in a national emergency, would cause members of Congress from interior states, as well as those who oppose military expenditures on general principles, to fight even the necessary maintenance appropriation for coast defense during the next session of Congress.

It was not denied today that the railway gun project has been considered as possible of realization.

Surveys of railroad facilities in the first corps area, which includes Massachusetts and the other New England states, have been made with a view to their utilization in the movement of the new heavy guns, it was admitted, and tentative locations for spur tracks, from which the guns would be fired, already have been selected.

SURVEYS MADE

To all inquiries as to where these spur tracks emplacements would be located, war department officials said that their locations were military secrets and would not be divulged until they were constructed. It is known, however, that preliminary surveys for the placing of railway guns to command the Cape Cod canal and Boston harbor, as well as Narragansett bay and other strategic points in New England, already have been made.

Army engineers have tested the strength of roadbeds and bridges along seaboard rail lines, including the New York, New Haven & Hartford, to determine if the existing facilities are strong enough to stand the huge weight of the new railway guns. In only one instance, it is reported, did the engineers find it necessary to recommence strengthening of a railway bridge in New England in the interests of the national defence plan.

Coastal lines of the New Haven Railroad in Connecticut and Rhode Island would be utilized for the transportation of the newly developed railway guns to the location of their firing places, which already tentatively have been selected. Rail lines in other parts of New England, particularly along Cape Cod and the Maine and Massachusetts coasts, have been gone over thoroughly by military experts, it is understood, and locations for gun emplacements selected.

Supplementing the heavy guns will be anti-aircraft units of the regular army and national guard, mounted on speedy motor trucks capable of following the rail artillery which is expected to have a speed of about 20 miles per hour.

OTHER PLANS ON FILE

The railway gun plan, for all the stir made by its publication, is but one of many war plans, it was explained, on file in the archives of the war department.

The railway project fits in with the already established system of coast defense forts and, with the national federal aid system of highways, construction of which the war department has advocated for many years to afford highway facilities for quick mobilization and concentration of troops and equipment, particularly along the seaboard.

One of the arguments in favor of the spur track emplacement plan is the development of these very highways which would provide the means for an invading force quickly to move upon a city or other strategic military objective after landing at a comparatively isolated spot. With heavy guns capable of being concentrated in short order at almost any menaced point along the seaboard, their crews aided in the air fire upon an enemy 30 miles at sea by airplanes and naval forces, and protected from air attack by motorized anti-aircraft guns and their own air forces, the possibility of utilization of American highways by an enemy force is being reduced to a minimum.

Snatches Up Mail Pouches From Liner at Sea

Invention installed on deck of the Leviathan enables plane to pick up mail bags while ship is several hundred miles off shore, expediting mail delivery by many hours. BISHOP CANNON SPECULATED, BROKER SAYS

Methodist Leader Bought Stock Outright Only Once, Says Bankrupt Firm Head

New York, June 28—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, never bought a share of stock outright and, except for the purchase of 200 shares of Hudson Motors on a part payment plan, "speculated exclusively," in his dealings with the firm of Kable & Co., according to testimony given at the bankruptcy hearing on the firm's affairs.

Harry L. Goldhurst, actual head of the collapsed firm, testified that the Bishop's lone, non-speculative purchase had not been completed when the company went to the wall.

C. Edward Benoit, attorney for Miss Anna Fraina, trustee in bankruptcy, questioned Goldhurst about the ledger account of Bishop Cannon's intensive tradings. Pointing to one item, the attorney said:

"You have here the sale of 300 shares of Lehigh on October 16, 1927. That was on Sunday. You didn't do business, did you, Mr. Goldhurst, on Sundays and surely the Bishop didn't do business on Sundays?"

A roar of laughter from the spectators in the hearing room drowned out Goldhurst's faint "no" in reply.

Ernest A. Brown, an accountant, testified that an examination of the company's books showed that friends and relatives were heavy creditors of the fair and that the assets were $24,010 and the liabilities $226,804. The Bishop was a creditor for $2500. The hearing was adjourned until July 9.

Samaritan Autoist Acquitted by Jury

Brockton, June 28—Alfred J. Benoit of Rockland claimed he was the good Samaritan who picked up an injured boy from the road in Rockland last January and carried him to the hospital for care, but the police didn't believe him. He was tried in superior court here on operating an automobile so as to endanger the lives and safety of the public, however, and the jury took another view of the situation. He was found not guilty.

The government contended it was Benoit's car that struck 10-year-old Edward Tomasso of Central st., Rockland.

Tear Gas to Protect Postoffice Vaults

Washington, June 28—Major postoffice robberies are expected to dwindle to a nonentity due to the Postoffice Department's decision to install tear bombs inside postal vault doors. Railway mail clerks are being supplied with new and handier pistols instead of clumsy World War revolvers to more adequately protect the mail, which has on a record night amounted to nearly $20,000,000.

Huge sums carried by the air mail has become the object of departmental consideration, it was made known at the Postoffice Department. It was said that as much as $1,500,000 a night now goes by air mail, and that further protection than the revolver carried by each pilot is necessary.

Considerable faith is put in the efficacy of the tear bomb device. The bomb is being installed with the view to incapacitating bandits the moment any vital part of the vault door is tampered with.

A department order has gone out requiring installation of the device on the vault doors of all offices used for major postal operations whether owned by the government or not. This covers first and second class offices, including everything in New York City.

The bomb, encased in a patented box, is affixed to the inside central of the door. Radiating from it to the locks, knobs and all bolts are sensitive wires. The slightest pressure on any one of these wires is capable of exploding the bomb, filling the air inside and outside the vault with mustard gas.

The entire cost of equipping all first and second class postoffices with the device is estimated at no more than $500,000 since the cost ranges from $55 to $100 a door. The scheme was put to a practical test in Memphis a few years ago and bandits were frustrated the moment their drills came in contact with the drawbolt.

So far, no new method of protecting the air mail, once it is in flight, has been devised, according to officials, but it was said that careful thought is being given to the hazards of sending a pilot singly and across the western plains with the valuable cargo carried.

"AIDA" GIVEN BEFORE 7000

The production of the opera "Aida" at Braves Field, the greater part of the proceeds of which were given to the Herzl memorial committee of Boston to be used in perpetuation of the life of Dr. Theodore Herzl, late founder of Zionism, attracted an audience of 7000.

Through the courtesy of Judge Emil Fuchs, the opera was presented by Maurice Frank, well known for his productions of open-air music, and David Kahan, managing director.

The Boston Herzl committee is composed of Henry Yozell, chairman; Judge David A. Lourie, Max Schoolman, Elihu D. Stone and Mrs. Albert Salter. The production was sponsored by the New England Zionist organization, the Hadassah group of New England and the Federated Jewish Charities.

Julia Peters, well-known operatic soprano, sang the role of Aida, assisted by Elizabeth Heppel, contralto; Fernando Bertini, tenor; Miguel Santacanna, basso; Ciro De Rittis, baritone. Gabriel Simeon conducted ═ orchestra of 60 pieces.

Lowell Tragedy Fund Reaches $18,000

Lowell, June 28 Following the example of the fire department, which gave a spontaneous contribution of $[illegible] to the relief fund being raised for the stricken families left fatherless by the recent sewer tragedy, the school department subscribed an equal amount.

With $12,000 raised by the newspapers and about $6000 from other sources, but not yet recorded, the total is now approximately $18,000. A boxing carnival will be held Monday night with many notable ring performers listed to appear. All receipts will be turned over to the relief fund.

Malden Woman Injured by Auto

Reading, June 28 Miss Florence B. Adams, 31, of 663 Maine st., Malden, is at the Wakefield Hospital with a fractured skull and contusions sustained when she was struck by an automobile operated by Edwin A. Thornquist, 18, of West Medford, at Sanborn Hill. She was struck as she alighted from a street car a short distance from the Reading barracks of the state police.

NEW DISTRICTS FOR MAINE

Augusta, Me., June 28 - In view of the fact that Maine is to lose a Congressman by the new plan of apportionment, it will be up to the next Legislature to pass a bill redistricting the state. One plan under discussion would give the three coast counties of the old second district to a new middle district and adds Hancock and Washington of the existing third district to the new eastern district.

Under this plan, the first district would comprise Cumberland, York, Sagadahoc, Lincoln and Knox Counties, while the second district would take in Oxford, Androscoggin, Franklin, Somerset, Kennebec and Waldo Counties. The third district would include Aroostook, Penobscot, Piscataquis, Hancock and Washington Counties.

The population of the first district would be then about 261,000, of the second district about 250,000 and of the third 282,000. It is likely that the councilor districts may remain the same, but some controversy may arise over Senate and House reapportionments.

GEORGIA SCORES WHITE HOUSE ENTERTAINMENT OF NEGRESS

RESOLUTION OF 'REGRET' IS ADOPTED

Such Instances as De Priest Case Harm Negro Race, Is Legislators' View

Atlanta, Ga., June 28—A resolution adopted by the Georgia House of Representatives voices disapproval of the entertainment of the wife of Representative De Priest, negro, of Illinois, at the White House.

The resolution was adopted after an extended debate, the vote being 179 to 5. It follows:

Resolved by the Georgia General Assembly that we deeply regret the recent occurrences in the official and social life of the national capital which have a tendency to revive and intensify racial discord.

That inasmuch as such occurrences tend to delude the negro population of the country into believing that social equality and intermingling with the white race is a possibility for them, they are exceedingly injurious to the negro himself and should be discontinued by all who have the welfare of the negro at heart.

One of its authors, Rep. Crawford, pointed out that the resolution mentioned no names.

"It merely condemns the practice of the White House in putting negroes on a plane of social equality," he said. "I want it distinctly understood that it was not aimed at any Georgian who voted for Herbert Hoover, because persons who voted for Hoover condemn this action as much as any other Southerner."

Rep. Stewart of Atkinson declared that the matter affected every white man "because it is a question of white supremacy. I think that this resolution as offered is not strong enough. The action of Mrs. Hoover has done one thing. It has restored the solid South."

Rep. McGehee, one of the five who voted against the final adoption of the measure, explained that he did so because it could do no possible good to the state.

Prior to the motion to table, Rep. Battle of Muscogee declared the incident was beneath the dignity of the House to take notice of "and that the whole matter should be treated with the contempt it deserved."

HAYS HIT BY 'CHURCHMAN'

New York, June 28—A strong editorial attack on Will Hays "Czar of the Movies" in which he is referred to as a "window dresser" for the movies with a "gift for pious lamentation" who uses "his sobbing piety to hamstring the public," is published in June 29 issue of The Churchman, a national weekly of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

"Certainly the church journals have entered on no organized propaganda against the movies," the editorial reads, "they are willing, like other groups in America, to accept the statement of the motion picture industry that Will Hays has been employed to clean up the movies' These editors are not under the slightest illusion that Mr. Hays has done so.

"The Churchman is opposed to censorship on principle. The motion picture industry is opposed to censorship because of box office phobia. It fears a dollar-and-cent loss. In spite of the liberal sentiment in the churches, however, the motion picture industry is going to get censorship, and real censorship, if it doesn't stop hamstringing the public."

Coast Guard Shot; Wife Badly Beaten

Winthrop police are investigating a mysterious shooting which occurred when Frank Le Pre, 29, of 61 Coral ave., a member of the coast guard service, was found lying on the floor of one of the rooms of his house, with a bullet hole through his thigh. His wife Virginia, who was found badly beaten up, declared that an outsider was responsible, while Le Pre insists that he shot himself while cleaning a revolver of German make which was found in the house. Neighbors declared there was much commotion in the house and called the police. Patrolman Coffin responded. Dr. Daniel O'Brien was called and injected a serum to prevent lockjaw.

Crooks Shun Nashua, N. H., Where Police Are Rapidly Making It 'Crimeless City'

By CARL MORRISON

CROOKS have learned to keep away from Nashua, N. H., which is rapidly becoming the "crimeless city."

The reason for this careful avoidance of the gateway city of New Hampshire is the modern police system, directed by a chief known throughout the country as a finger print expert.

Nashua has a hot welcome planned for any disturbers of the peace. Machine guns, operated by World War veterans formerly in the Lafayette clubs of the A. E. F., and tear gas await trouble makers.

Chief Irving F. Goodwin is proud of his force of 40 men. The city, he says, is fortunate in having several former army sergeants in the police ranks.

NASHUA undisputably has one of the best equipped police stations in New England. The newest pounder type of police work is being replaced by officers doing their tour of duty in fast automobiles. There are now seven such cars and two motorcycles constantly patrolling the city, and doing effective work.

As for the chief himself, he has studied finger printing for many years as a hobby, but now has become one of the recognized leaders in this subject. He is often called into consultation in the cases elsewhere. A dozen years ago he installed the system in Nashua.

Chief Goodwin has been police chief in three cities, including Shirley, Mass., and 21 other [illegible] and he has also worked [illegible] land. He is secretary of the New England Police Chiefs Association, and recently served three years as president of the New Hampshire association. He is a member of the International Association of Police Chiefs and is local vice-president of the Lions club.

The chief, with a fishing pole on his shoulder, is a familiar figure during the week-ends at lakes and streams.

ALL-ROUND sportsman is William H. Beasom, banker and manufacturer. He is a crackshot and has many trophies of hunting trips for big game or birds.

Beasom, who is president of the Indian Head National Bank and head of the Nashua Brass Co., has been in the banking business since 1887. He was elected mayor in 1891, after having been a councilor and an alderman. He was later president of the board of aldermen, a member of several local, state and county sportsman's associations.

LONGEST in the city service in one office, is the record of Arthur L. Cyr, city clerk, the started in 25 years ago, when only 24 years old. Office holders who make good here are seldom removed even when the political complexion of the city changes.

Cyr is a past exalted ruler of the Elks and an active Knight of Columbus. He goes in strongly for golf and his score is often in the 90's. Of city hall. Reading the latest fiction and non-fiction is really his hobby.

SUPERVISING the manufacture of 5,000,000 blankets yearly is John W. Winterbottom, superintendent of the Nashua Manufacturing Co. This mill is the largest of its kind in the world, and once had Daniel Webster as a stockholder.

Winterbottom, who started at the age of 14 years as a general employe, has been 28 years in the textile game." His hobby is gardening, and he raises some excellent iris.

SCOVA SPEARE, Chamber of Commerce president, who is seeking more industries for Nashua, has been in the dry goods business for 17 years. He is a typical Nashua booster.

This man has a distinction which he believes is unique. His first name is the only one of its kind in the world, so he has been informed. It comes from the Bible, which refers to "A Jew named Sceva who has seven sons."

The hobby of this modern Sceva is automobiling.

MAYOR WILLIAM F. SULLIVAN, in his second year as a non-partisan mayor, is anything but non-partisan when it comes to boosting Nashua. He is the city's champion booster and knows Nashua history and advantages like a golfer knows his rival's score sheet.

"Bud" Sullivan is a regular fellow, everyone says in Nashua. He started in public service years ago when he was "drafted" as nominee of both Republicans and Democrats for state senator. Later he was swept into office by at least two to one margin.

The mayor called attention to the position of his city as gateway to his state, and on the threshold of "vacationland" of upper New England and Canada.

"We are a city of diversified industries," he commented, and then told of the advantages of being at the junction of the Nashua and Merrimack rivers. Nashua for nearly a century has been a railroad center.

Train connections to Boston are excellent, and a run of one hour with a single stop, makes business for Nashua.

MAYOR SULLIVAN has been president of the Chamber of Commerce, and during the World War was chairman of several important drives.

"While we do not live in the glory of our past," said the mayor "we are proud of some fact."

He then pointed out that Nashua was the home of the famous Howe sewing machine, of the noted Waltham watch, of the largest blanket mill in the world and once housed the greatest iron and steel mill in the world.

John Ericson designed the Monitor of Civil War fame in Nashua and the turrets for this famous battler were built here.

This mayor likes to "keep himself physically young" from the office on a hot afternoon to go swimming with his children or to take them to a baseball game. His greatest ambition just now is to obtain a new city hall.

Quincy Girl Secret Bride for 6 Months

The secret wedding of Miss Mabel Overlock, daughter of Mrs. Edith M. Overlock, of 72 Hughes st., Quincy, to Irving Butler, of 7 Bedford st., same city, has been disclosed by the girl in her mother.

The couple were wed at Nashua, N. H., on January 22, this year. Mrs. Butler is president of the Young Women's Community Club of Quincy. She informed relatives and friends that she married secretly because as head of the Community Club she feared she would cause undue publicity.

Bent Shaft Downs Swedish Fliers

Reykjavik, Iceland, June 28—The trouble with the Swedish plane Sverige which forced it back here a few hours after starting for Ivigtut, Greenland, was found to be a bent crankshaft. It was supposed that it had been strained when the plane was towed to the Westman Islands after the airplane had been forced down on its flight from Bergen, Norway.

FUGITIVE GIVES SELF UP

Cincinnati, June 28—The da[illegible] was hot and my guard was taking a nap. The train drew into a station. The chance was too good to miss. I walked out on him, returned to Boston to close some business dates and then came back to Cincinnati to surrender."

That was the explanation given by John G. Flynn, Salem, Mass., when he walked into the United States marshal's office in the Government Building at Cincinnati and surrendered to Chief Deputy Lee Bellman.

Flynn escaped almost a week ago while being brought to Cincinnati from Buffalo on the charge of transporting a stolen automobile from Swampscott, Mass., to Cincinnati. Since that time he had been the object of an intensive search by deputy marshals of the eastern district of the United States.

Hospitality of Hub Wins English Mayor

Mayor John Armored of Barkburn, England, who has been spending a few days at the home of Mrs. Mary Eleanor Nickerson, widow of Capt. Enos Nickerson, famous fisherman and life saver of Quincy left there for Washington and other cities. He has been in Boston at the Presbyterian conference and made his home with Mrs. Nickerson at 24 Edgeworth rd. Atlantic. Mayor Armored said he never experienced such gracious hospitality as was shown him by the people of Boston and Quincy. In his own words the people of Boston "are the kindest people in the world and their hospitality is beyond compare."

TERCENTENARY PLAN ADOPTED AT SESSION

Four Days Set Aside for Statewide Observance of Anniversary

Plans for the celebration next year of the 300th anniversary of the Bay State were moving forward rapidly today, following a general session of the Massachusetts Tercentenary conference in the Hotel Somerset at which delegates from 23 towns and cities were present.

The general chairman of the conference, Prof. Joseph H. Beale, presided and the business included action on a report of the executive committee, which was presented by N. Winthrop Robinson of Dorchester and Stoughton Bell of Cambridge. The first part of the report dealt with a plan for statewide and simultaneous events to take place on given dates in many parts of the State, as well as in local communities. The second section dealt with a list of suggested features which might be included in the local celebration program.

The plan suggested for uniform observances to be recommended to every town and city follow.

Jack Sharkey Confident of Whipping Schmeling

SEPTEMBER BATTLE IN OFFING

gerous I have ever faced, because he packs dynamite in both fists.

"But, the slow-moving Paulino managed to avoid those haymakers for 15 rounds, so I should have little trouble doing so.

"And, if Schmeling fights me as he fought the Basque I think I will put him away inside the limit.

"I believe that if I stop the German I will be regarded as the heavyweight champion of the world. Since that is my life's ambition, I will enter the ring determined to put Max to sleep in short order."

SCHMELING handed Paulino a decisive defeat. He had the Basque on the verge of a knockout when the final bell sounded.

During the 15th round, Paulino could hardly see his opponent as both of his eyes were partly closed, while his face was covered with claret.

Paulino's fighting instinct is the only thing which enabled him to carry on. He stumbled forward and tried to score with wild blows. As he could not see Max, except when the latter was at close quarters, most of his punches went wild.

Paulino was subjected to even a more severe licking than Tom Heeney received from Gene Tunney last summer. Only his remarkable courage and ability to absorb punishment enabled him to carry on.

Paulino carried only two rounds, the third and eighth, in the other sessions the youthful German was out front.

PAULINO was in wretched condition when the final gong sounded. Both eyes were partly closed, while he was bleeding freely from the wound in his mouth. His face was bruised and marked as a result of the steady battering of blows which Max rained down on him.

The youthful German's appearance was a direct contrast to that of Paulino. His face was unmarked other than for a slight bruise over his right eye. He did not even appear tired as he gracefully walked to his corner.

When proclaimed the winner, Max gallantly turned Joe Humphreys the announcer, around, and then went over and slapped Paulino on the back. He lifted the battered Basque to his feet and assisted him to the centre of the ring where he insisted that Paulino share the applause of the crowd with him. It was a fine spirit on the part of the German youngster, who is blessed with one of the best punches of any heavyweight of recent years.

No man other than the rugged Paulino, who has never been kneeled off his feet, would have been able to have stood up under such a bruising attack.

ROUND BY ROUND STORY OF GREAT MILK FUND BATTLE

PAULINO entered the ring first. He was followed by Schmeling. He weighed 192½ pounds. Schmeling 187 pounds.

ROUND FIVE—Schmeling is the aggressor. Uzcudun bounced a left hook off Max's chin, but could gain no further advantage as they slugged and mauled apart. Paulino came out of his shell, but his sweeping left and right hooks went over Schmeling's head. Max sent both hands to the Spaniard's forehead. Uzcudun looped a left hook through the punches and brought up his right to the chin at close quarters. Paulino went to his corner at the bell with a trickle of blood seeping from one nostril.

ROUND TEN—The referee kept bothering the fighters to keep out of clinches, but they still persisted in going to close quarters. Paulino missed a wild uppercut. Schmeling sent two straight lefts to the face. Max sent his right to the head. Max popped Paulino with a straight left. Paulino's right eye was partly closed as the result of a bombardment of left hooks. Schmeling opened up and countered with solid lefts and rights to the chin. Max rocked Paulino with a head. NEW YORK, JUNE 28—LACK OF EXPEERIENCE COST Max Schmeling a knockout victory over Paulino Uzcudun at the Yankee Stadium. The German pummeled the Basque hard from the tenth round on and should have finished him before the end.

In the last three rounds Paulino was virtually blind and it was in these three sessions that Max showed need of schooling. He had the punch to finish Paulino, but just couldn't seem to get it over.

I predict that if Schmeling, who is young and strong the proved the last by pulling with Paulino for 10 rounds) takes good care of himself, he will be the next champion of the world. I think that even now he can beat any of the heavies, with the possible exception of Jack Dempsey.

Max made a mistake, I think, in fighting head to head with Paulino in the early rounds. His cue was to stand off and box the Basque, sending in his heavy right for clean shots whenever possible. This style of milling probably would have given him the knockout he seemed to desire so much.

IT was a gruelling fight and not much to look at in the early rounds, but when Max opened up in the 10th he showed one of the best right hands I've seen in many a day.

The Basque lived up to his reputation for supreme courage, a trait which, coupled with his greater experience, I thought would carry him to victory, but courage alone wasn't enough. He rushed and heaved and chopped at Max's body, but without apparent effect. Schmeling didn't seem puzzled by Paulino's peculiar crouch and he showed good boxing brains by countering frequently with short, hard rights.

With another month or two of training Schmeling likely will succeed where Young Stribling failed.

Jack Sharkey must watch out.

Stover of the economics department and coach of the team. The netmen had an average of 1.81 out of a possible 3.0 for the group averages, a standing that is surpassed only by three gurie' social clubs. The 1.81 average is .60 higher than the general college average., Captain-elect Wolfe had the highest mark for any member of the team, with a straight 3.0 average.

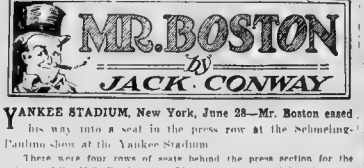
Miss Holton and Sally Brooks Meet

Sally Brooks of Winthrop will meet Eleanor Holton in a quarter-final match in the women's singles of the Tedesco tennis tournament at 11 o'clock today.

Miss Brooks earned the right to meet last year's champion by a straight-set victory over Annetta Conkin of Marblehead yesterday, 6—1, 6—3. Miss Holton won his second round match in the men's singles over A. S. Potter, 6—3, 6—1. Lacroix, paired with S. W. Paine, won in the first round of the men's doubles over A. S. Potter and W. N. McKinna, 8—7, 6—2.



YANKEE STADIUM, New York, June 28—Mr. Boston eased his way into a seat in the press row at the Schmeling-Paulino show at the Yankee Stadium.

There were four rows of seats behind the press section for the patrons of the Milk Fund affair. These seats brought $50 each.

Mr. Boston noticed Jack Sharkey and Mrs. Sharkey parked with the care-free millionaires. Johnny Buckley and Mrs. Buckley and Mr and Mrs. George Lee of Worcester were also down front.

"Hello, Mr. Boston," came a voice a little way back in the ringside section. It was that of Dan Carroll, who was accompanied by Jim Maloney and Major Lynch. They had made the trip over the road from Boston by motor.

Mr. Boston took a peek around the ringside and saw Dist. Atty. Bill Foley, Bill McDonnell, his able assistant; Eddie Mack, Dave Bream, who used to be one of Joe Eagan's faithful followers in the old days; Phil Buccola and Mrs. Buccola, Riccardo Bertazzolo, Johnny Cassela, Doc Bagley, Boo Boo Hoff, Sheldon H. Fairbanks, Col. Bob McKirdy and Ruby Gibson.

"Guess everybody in boxing's Who's Who is here," remarked Mr. Boston. "Let the show go on."

There was perfect order at the Stadium as the great crowd became seated.

"Bill Carey has retained Tex Rickard's efficient methods of handling big crowds," said Mr. Boston. "Rickard always took pride in the fact that everybody always got his seat at Garden shows. Bill Carey has followed the example set by Tex."

Mr. Boston found numerous different betting odds at post time. Some of the big bettors installed Schmeling a 6-to-5 favorite, while others had the Basque a 6-to-5 choice.

SARAZEN IS FIRST TO TEE OFF

WINGED FOOT COUNTRY CLUB, Mamaroneck, N. Y., June 28 (AP)—Faced by such stars as Gene Sarazen, Al Espinosa and Walter Hagen, the field in the national open golf championship began the second round of 18 holes today with weather conditions again close to ideal.

Sarazen, who shot a fine 71 yesterday to take third place at the end of the first 18 holes, was the first of the leaders to leave, teeing off at 8:30. Walter Hagen started out at 8:35, hoping to do better than the 76 he got his first round yesterday. Espinosa left the first tee ten minutes later with a 70 and runner-up position behind him.

The weather was cooler, clouds obscuring the sun at intervals.

Sarazen started even with par on the first two holes at 4-4. He missed an eight-foot putt inches f.- a three on the 375-yard second.

Hagen started with 5—4—4 of one over par on the first and third holes and even with orthodox figures on the second.

Sarazen was in the rough on the 217-yard third and took a four, one over par. After bagging his par four easily on the fourth, Smoky Gene laid his approach stone dead for a birdie four on the 517-yard fifth, making him even with par again.

Hagen took 3 putts on the third green, after a fine tee shot. He took four on the fourth and got a stroke back on the 5th by sinking a six-foot putt for a birdie four.

Sarazen's par four was easy on the sixth. He laid a No. 5 iron dead on the 170-yard seventh and sank a four footer for a deuce.

Gene's approach to the 435-yard eighth was short. He laid a nice chip three feet from the cup, but missed and took five.

Playing the ninth into a stiff breeze, Sarazen hooked his brassie second into the rough, 60 yards short of the 517-yard green. He chipped short but got his par five.

SEEKS TITLE AT LONGWOOD

Majorie Gladman, pretty University of Southern California co-ed, who meets Marjorie Sachs of Radcliffe at Longwood today for the honor of being the first women's intercollegiate champion.

College Girls Play Tennis Final Today

By JOHN GILLOOLY

THE first women's intercollegiate tennis title was to be decided on either the East or West coast today as Miss Marjorie Gladman, blonde co-ed from the University of Southern California, and Miss Marjorie Sachs, a student at Radcliffe, struggled in the final match.

Miss Gladman, who has been in the tennis hall of fame for some few years and is a national figure was a decided favorite to win the crown and carry it back to the sun-kissed slopes.

Miss Sachs, who is one of the best women tennis players in New England, has ability. She plays a hard, steady game and seldom becomes erratic. She offers a speedy service and plays a generally good all around game. Miss Gladman though, has few weaknesses. In defeating Miss Dorrance Chase of Simmons, she looked like another Helen Wills.

WHILE the Western girls are scintillating in the collegiate tournament twin sisters from Malden are giving the junior tournament a very keen tinge. They are the Boehm girls, Hilda and Helen. Helen plays Helen Bidwell in the semifinal today while sister Hilda will try to oppose Louise Packer, seeded No. 1, in the other semifinal match.

It is likely that the Boehm girls will be seen in the final. And the Malden girls have also reached the semifinal round in the junior doubles. Both are very steady and have out-done their more famous opponents in tennis wisdom in the tournament thus far.

ANDRE ROUTIS, CHAMPION, TO BOX ZERAMBY

The appearance of one of the few recognized champions of the world will mark the launching of the summer boxing season at the Boston Garden for Andre Routis of France, world's featherweight champion, has finally consented to box Zeramby, Italian sebastian, as opponent Monday night, July 1.

The champion balked at accepting this match on account of the southpaw style of the sensational Lapp youngster, who has punched his way from the ranks of the preliminary boys to a spot in the limelight during the past few months. Routis' beaver was finally persuaded to agree to the match although it was necessary to guarantee him a huge sum before he finally consented to come to the Hub.

This show will mark the first of the summer series of boxing features planned by the Garden management and according to present plans, these bouts will be enjoyed in a most comfortable atmosphere. Work is progressing on the installation of fans and blowers which will produce a lower temperature on a hot night than in the open air.

At the same time a summer schedule of prices has been determined for these shows which will be conducted every Tuesday night after the opener.

LEWIS TRAINING HARD FOR BOUT WITH SONNY

Big Ed Lewis, former title-holder, who hopes to regain his crown when he meets Gus Sonnenberg, the present champion of the mid-dle weights at Fenway Park the night of July 5 is doing a lot of training these days at the Revere beach park, and there is no faking about it either.

Realizing that he has got a man scared up a bit, if not all of him, Ed is working with three or four partners, all big huskies, and the fans can see him every afternoon at 3 o'clock free of all charge. Already thousands have availed themselves of the privilege.

In these workouts the "Strangler" is giving extra attention to a defense for Sonnenberg's flying tackle, the only trick possessed by the champion that Big Ed realizes fears. And he knows all about it, for his bitter experience the person which befell him January 4, when Gus knocked him free from his crib.

It has been learned that in these morning gym affairs Lewis wears a big, padded body protector similar to that worn by baseball catchers and that his partners are expected to do nothing but bombard him with flying tackles and body butts. The idea of the protector is to save Big Ed from injury, also to thoroughly familiarize him with Sonny's style of attack and how to effectually counter it.

U. S. NET STARS TOP BRITONS

Wimbledon, England, June 28 Americans continued to dominate the field in each section of the title tennis play here on the Wimbledon courts. Bill Tilden and Molla Mallory, veterans who dominated in U. S. tennis circles in their respective fields for many years, are going along at top speed, paired in the mixed doubles play.

In the women's doubles matches Mrs. Mae Sutton Bundy, noted tennis figure for over two decades, teamed up with Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, Mass., to defeat Mrs. Uher and Miss K. Lewis of England, 6 4, 6 3.

Miss Morrill played splendidly in the latter match. Much younger than Mrs. Bundy, she was able to take the burden of many of the tough shots and covered her territory perfectly.

Helen Jacobs went into the fourth round of the women's singles by her rather easy win over Mrs. Randolph of England, 6 2, 6 2.

Miss Jacobs was all over the court going after returns, and her placing of the ball was uncanny. If she continues to play as she did in the last match it is likely that she may force Helen Wills to play super tennis to win providing they meet.

The defeat of Betty Nuthall, top flight English woman star, by Mrs. L. R. C. Mitchell of England, 6-3, 6-3, was the most surprising upset of the tourney to date.

Miss Nuthall was expected to prove Helen Wills' toughest foe, and the elimination of the English girl naturally makes the task of Miss Wills a lot easier.

SWIM TWINS BREAK RECORD

By BERNICE AND PHYLLIS ZITENFIELD

(Fifteen-Year-Old Twins Training to Swim the English Channel)

Dover, Eng., June 27—With the Prince gone back to his duties of state, we again turned our attention to the sport that brought us here, swimming.

And if you don't think we have plenty of reason to feel elated as the result of our latest workout, then you just haven't heard the details. Here's what happened.

We went out for a swim as far as Dover breakwater and back, a distance of about three miles, which we made in 65 minutes.

Bill Kellogby and Uncle Charlie Kornbluth, who were pacing us in a rowboat, and afterward: "That is the fastest time any swimmer, either long distance or sprinter, has ever made around these parts to my knowledge."

After a conference with Captain Pearson, the channel veteran who will pilot our guiding boat, the route which we will follow in our big test across the channel, was established. It is a zigzag course and so difficult to calculate the exact number of miles we will have to cover, and depending, of course, upon conditions as we meet them. We are due to make the swim the end of July.

WILEY'S RECORD BIKERS' GOAL

One of the feature races of the year is carded for the Revere Cycle Track Saturday night, when Nat Butler stages an hour race for the George Wiley cup. Six riders are entered and will be out to break Wiley's hour record for Revere, 45 miles 3 laps.

The contestants include Victor Hopkins, Iowa farmer boy, winner of Wednesday night's race; George Chapman, Newark, winner in three of the five races at the beach oval; Frankie Keenan, the Revere boy, Victor Rausch, the German; Charlie Winter and Franz Duelberg, another German.

The two Germans, Duelberg and Reuth, have been the surprises of the season at the local track. Neither had ever ridden behind pace to any great extent before this year, yet both are making it a great race in all their contests. Each has made himself a big favorite with Revere fans.

B & N CREW IS NEAR RECORD

London, June 28. In a trial spin the Browne-Nichols eight came within three seconds of breaking the existing course record for the Thames challenge cup for which they will compete in the famous Henley regatta next week.

Without any intention of rowing against the clock the crew started from the official starting post. When half way over the course, the coach discovered the Boston eight was only four seconds outside the record and without pushing, the crew clipped off another second before reaching the finish. The fast time was made over water that was far from smooth.

Koloff Barred by Illinois Board

Chicago, June 28 (AP)—Dan Koloff, heavyweight wrestler from Boston, will do no wrestling in Illinois rings for at least a year, unless the Illinois Athletic Commission rejects.

The commission yesterday suspended Koloff on charges made by Chairman Paul Prehn, that Koloff has served too faithfully and under too many different names, as an opponent for Champion Gus Sonnenberg.

Prehn charged that Koloff has met Sonnenberg six times in different sections of the country since March 19, five times under assumed names.

32 Letters Are Given at Norwich

Northfield, Vt., June 28—Thirty-two letters have been awarded to Norwich athletes. In baseball, 10 men received major letters while in track, 15 cadets won major awards and seven got minor letters.

Johnny Indrisano to Battle Peters

Upstate fans are displaying considerable interest over the coming battle between Johnny Indrisano, East Boston's contender for the welterweight title, and Frank Peters of Germany which will be decided in the Fitchburg Baseball Park Wednesday night. This will be the first professional boxing show staged in Fitchburg in many years and a large crowd is expected to be in attendance.

Indrisano is now on a comeback campaign and hopes it will lead him up to a shot at Champion Joe Dundee. The Noddle Islander, who already whipped Dundee and Tommy Freeman, will be out to win decisively but he is facing a tough customer in the German who will make him extend to the limit throughout the 10 rounds. This show will be supported by an excellent preliminary card.

Cornell Athletics Hit by Graduation

Ithaca, N. Y., June 28. Varsity teams at Cornell lose 75 regulars by graduation this June. Football is hardest hit, with virtually the entire line and 12 out of the 23 letter men on the squad lost. John F. Anderson of Glendale, O., mentioned as an All-American tackle, Olympic team member and scorer in the recent Intercollegiates in the discus, has finished a career which establishes him as one of Cornell's most famous athletes.

State Medalists Win in 2d Round

Mrs. E. H. Baker and R. M. Gardiner playing under the colors of Kittansett, medalists in the qualifying round of the State mixed foursome championship being played at Weston, continued their winning ways by easily taking their second round match and a place in the semifinals, which will be played today.

Johnson-Jeffries Bout My Greatest, Rickard Told Tad

Veteran's Story Vivid Picture of Reno Battle

For many years "Tad," T. A. Dorgan, one of the greatest cartoonists of sporting authorities that ever lived, covered the "fight" game. Shortly before his death "Tad" wrote and illustrated a series of stories describing in his inimitable style those ring battles which for thrills and sensationalism were stamped indelibly in his mind. These remarkable stories dealt not only with fights in which titles were at stake, but with thrilling affairs staged in private and at the smaller clubs. This is one of the stories.

By TAD

IN a talk with Tex Rickard I was told by that shrewd promoter that the Jim Jeffries-Jack Johnson fight, held July 4, 1910, at Reno, Nev., was the greatest he ever put on. Tex also refereed that battle.

Surely there never was a fight that attracted so much attention. Sport writers and sporting men from all over the world came to see it. The late W. F. Corbett came all the way from Australia; France sent two or three men, and England was well represented at the ringside.

For over six years Johnson followed Jeffries looking for a fight, but Jeff, fearing the big colored man, ducked him continuously, and finally drew the color line and then retired.

Six years later, however, he decided to re-enter the ring and fight. He trained hard for over a year, got himself into perfect shape, and on the day of the battle was a perfect specimen of fighting man except that the heart was not quite as strong as it might have been. He felt that Johnson was his superior, while Johnson was certain that he was Jeff's master.

It was a great crowd that was present in the dusty, sun-baked arena that afternoon at Reno. There you could see the greatest collection of fight fans that ever got together for a fight. Nat Goodwin, Lou Houseman, Big Tim Sullivan, Charley White, John L. Sullivan, Ketchel, Tommy Burns, Pittsmmons, Longford, Tim McGrath, Spider Kelly, Walter Kelly, Eddie Leon, Wilson Mizner, Jim Coffroth, Jack Root, William Muldoon, and any number of others.

JEFFRIES was favorite in the betting at 2 to 1, and many thousands of dollars were bet all over the land.

When the big fellows stepped into the ring that day about 2 p. m. there wasn't much of a fuss. Both received a hand and got right down to business. Jeff had in his corner Jim Corbett, Dewitt Van Court, Joe Choynski, Farmer Burns, Sam Berger, Abe Attell and Bob Armstrong.

Behind Johnson were Billy Delaney, Al Kaufman, Harry Foley and Professor Burns.

Johnson took the corner facing the sun. He refused to match Sam Berger for corners, saying that Jeff could have the shady side of the ring. Billy Jordan presented them to the crowd and bang went the bell.

Jeff crouched as he always did and tore into the big black fellow, only to receive a left hook right on the eye. There was a clinch as they came around to my side of the ring.

Johnson, whose arms were held tight by Jeff, said: "Let go, let go, stop lovin' me."

Jeff growled: "I'll love you before I'm through with you."

It was the same thing round after round. Johnson hooked Jeff in the right eye, and Jeff missed Johnson continually. The latter blocked all of Jeff's leads and then smiled and talked to Jeff's seconds as he walked around in the clinches.

By the time the sixth round came Jeff's right eye was shut, just as Willard's was at Toledo. Johnson kept poking at it and occasionally switched with a left hand to the body. He was unhurt himself. The only real punch landed so far by Jeff was a left jab to the mouth that opened an old cut.

IN the clinches Johnson did as he pleased with Jeff's arms. Once he took Jeff's mighty left and turned it right around up Jim's back. Never before had Jeff met a man who was his equal in strength, but here was a man who was stronger.

Johnson, who had been called all sorts of names by writers who figured themselves experts, laughed all through the fight at them and kidded Corbett unmercifully. He was doing as he pleased with Jeff as Delaney held him back, watching for the first sign of weakness on the part of the boilermaker.

In the fifteenth Jeff rushed Johnson to the ropes, and as they were in close tried to jab his left to the body. Johnson had his hand on Jeff's arm, however, and the jab didn't have much power. Jeff tried again, and finally Johnson smilingly took his hand away and said to Jeff: "Here, take a good shot."

Johnson pulled away then, knowing that Jeff was hurt, and hooked him to the chin with a left. For the first time in his life Jeffries fell to the floor. He took the full count and got up. Another left sent him down again. This time he fell outside the lower rope, where some newspapermen pushed him back into the ring.

At nine he got up again and ran like a deer for his corner. Johnson waited about ten feet away to see whether the sponge was to come in or not. Jeff was satisfied to have it over with, but his seconds gave him a push and yelled, "Rua!"

He did. He ran along the ropes for about ten feet, but Johnson hooked him to the chin again and he went to the floor on his knees. The timekeeper counted up to seven and Jeff, looking around expecting to see the sponge come in, was disappointed. Finally he called for Berger to jump in. He waved for Sam to come in as he had had enough. His army of seconds helped him to his corner.

Pilot Obtains Patent on Safety Joy Stick

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

Word was received today by Tom Croce, the Boston Airport's "Gypsy pilot," that he had been granted a patent on his safety control stick for airplanes without reservations. Tom had listed 22 claims in his application and all 22 were granted. He will now go after patent rights in Canada and European countries.

The safety control stick is one of the greatest inventions for the safety of student and instructor Croce labored for three years before perfecting it.

The stick is a breakable "joy" stick, which permits the instructor to take control of the airplane away from the student when the latter becomes frightened, and "freezes" to the controls.

What is believed to be a record in the number of tri-motored planes was established when six flying monsters were on the airport in one day. Three of them are stationed here regularly, and the other trio were visitors.

Ray Boyer, former film and stage star, and now a graduate student of the Curtiss Flying Service school at Valley Stream, L. I., is a fer flying planes from the various Curtiss factories to the outlying stations around the country. He brought an OXX-6 Travel Air into the Hub port yesterday.

Ray and various mechanics of Curtiss here, including "Reg" Riley and "Mac" McKeever, who knew him in New York, had a great old time hopped down to New London with Joshua Crane in the latter's Bird plane from Dennison. She flew the ship and Josh was navigator. The hop was entirely uneventful and another two hours were added to Miss Mathews' flying log.

According to an order issued from the New York office of the Curtiss Flying Service, parachutes must be worn by all students and instructors; for other flying by students; for test and experimentation; and for cross-country over dangerous terrain in a single motored plane.

This is the first time on the airport that chutes have been worn by commercial pilots, other than the mail flyers.

The mere detail of a private pilot's license had failed to deter Mrs. Chase, wife of Doc Chase of Chelsea. She applied for the examination over a week ago, and she is still flying Doc's Travel Air, getting about an hour a day. She has about 20 solo hours to her credit now, and by the time she is given her private pilot's test she will be almost ready for her limited commercial.

Mrs. Chase

There is a contest going on at the airport between the two most enthusiastic women fliers, Mrs. Frank Chase and Miss Olivia Mathews. Both are striving to obtain their private license and then go on to the Johnny Bird limited commercial. Every day both can be seen batting around the sky, piling up the precious hours.

New England Airways, Inc., formerly Amesbury Airways, report their new field in Newburyport is rounding into shape, and they expect to start passenger and commercial service within six weeks. Harry Finnell, president of the company, states that passenger service will be run daily between Bangor, Augusta and Boston.

The company will be dealers for Stinson Detroiter, American Eagle and Great Lakes planes, and will operate complete commercial service at Augusta, Bangor and Newburyport.

Officers in the company include: Harry Finnell, president; James Dickens, treasurer; Herbert Folsom, secretary and Robert Patten, vice president. The directors of the company are: William Riddle, Jr.; Finnel Dickens, James Dunbar and Charles Eastman.

New England Airways' new field at Newburyport will be dedicated with a three day air meet Aug. 10, 11 and 12. All the New England commercial and army pilots will be invited to attend.

Capt. Albert L. Edson, airport director, had to go home in a hurry, and Josh Crane dropped in just at that time from Dennison Airport. Edson borrowed Crane's ship and hopped over to Dennison, thence by automobile to his home in Dorchester. He was back at the field 30 minutes after he took off. "Why take so much time to go home by automobile or trolley car when we can almost fly there in nothing flat?" asked "Eddie."

AIRPLANE RIDE PLANNED FOR LINDY CLUB

Well, boys and girls of the Boston American Lindbergh Club, how would you like a ride in a real airplane?

The Lindbergh Club has made arangements to accommodate a limited number of boys and girls for a nice long ride in an airplane. Of course we couldn't offer to give every boy and girl of the Lindbergh Club a free ride because there are 108,000 children enrolled now.

So here is what is offered to you. For a little work and a few minutes of your time you can have this ride in a real airplane. And it won't be just a few minutes in the air, but it will be a real trip, one that will give you a chance to enjoy the sport of flying up over cities and the countryside.

If you would like to make such a trip in an airplane, just write the secretary of the Boston American Lindbergh Club, P. O. Box 166, Boston, and full information and details as to how you can earn this offer will be sent you at once. The trip will not be hard to earn.

The Lindbergh Club today prints another list of 50 names of boys and girls who will receive a Lindy aviation hat if they write to the club within one week.

Watch for your name. Five of these hats will be given away daily until the supply is exhausted.

Noted Singer in Cast for Warner Talkie

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service)

LOS ANGELES, June 28. If there are any stray opera singers or famous actors loose in Hollywood it isn't the fault of Jack Warner or Winfield Sheehan and the rest of these producers who are apparently trying to cultivate the musical taste of the world. Jack Warner is at this very moment negotiating with John Charles Thomas for the role of Eric in "Golden Dawn." In fact, under cross-examination the youngest brother of the Warner trio admitted that everything is arranged except the actual signing of Thomas' name to the contract.

Think of hearing John Charles Thomas on the screen. He has been singing here at the Orpheum and the whole town has flocked to the theater. Walter Woolf, of course, will have the principal speaking role and Vivienne Segal, as we said yesterday, will furnish the feminine interest.

ALTHOUGH the movies have threatened us with a minstrel show ever since talkies became the rage, the best any of the studios have done is to promise a film few Rockefeller. We long for more than airy promises, and now it looks as if the Fox Company is going to put through with an old-fashioned minstrel show with the unmistakable title of "New Orleans Minstrels."

Walter Weems and William Collier Sr., are elected to write the words and dialogue and three real composers, Walter Donaldson and Edgar Leslie another group, and Al Wolfe Gilbert and Abel Baer still another set.

The cast up to the minute includes in addition to William Collier, the names of Walter Catlett, Sue Carol, Dixie Lee, David Percy, Joseph Wagstaff, George MacFarlane and others. Norman Taurog is slated as director.

DOROTHY MACKAYE, who has just been released from San Quentin, probably has more friends than she realizes. The moment First National announced the purchase of Arthur Hammerstein's play, "The Song of the Flame," in which Miss Mackaye played the leading role before tragedy touched her life, there were requests that she be signed for the film.

Of course, the operetta was produced in 1925 and whether or not Miss Mackaye would still be desirable for the role no one can know unless tests are made. Miss Mackaye is in Hollywood living quietly and trying to take up the broken threads of her life. I don't know who she shouldn't have a chance for she has paid well for any mistakes she may ever have made.

DOES the name Theodore Lindenfeld Ferris mean anything to you? You are probably saying to yourself "not a thing in the world." Well, he is none other than Stepin Fetchit, the Negro genius, who today ranks as the foremost comedian of his race on the screen. Stepin was married in the Catholic church yesterday morning, and before his 27-year-old bride, Dorothy Stevenson, became Mrs. Stepin she was confirmed in the Catholic faith. Stepin is exclusive, he is. He has moved to Pasadena to set up housekeeping and among his possessions is the snappy roadster he gave Mrs Stepin for a wedding gift.

ANN PENNINGTON resisted the barber's scissors all the time she was a Ziegfeld star on Broadway. The New York barbers tried in vain to coax her to have her curly locks cut in a fashionable bob, but Ann insisted she wasn't the type. Yesterday in Jimmie Reagis' Parlor she permitted one of Hollywood's most popular barbers to cut the famous Pennington curls and give her the latest thing in bobs. Miss Pennington was accompanied by Fanny Brice who told her she looked ten years younger. Now that she has gone completely Hollywood.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Ina Claire and John Gilbert standing all through a mass meeting of the film actors. Eleanor Boardman and King Vidor also among the famous standees. Corinne Griffith listening to the fiery speeches from a front seat on the floor. Hedda Hopper looking very smart in a green sport suit as she spoke her little piece.

Patsy Ruth Miller all in white, a perfect illustration of what the film stars wears asking a few pertinent questions. Senna Owen sitting quietly and listening. Louise Dresser getting a hand on her speech, also Marie Dressler and Willard Mack. Conrad Nagel trying his best to steer the ship of state out of troubled waters. That's all today. See you tomorrow.

CITIZENSHIP RUSH ON

Hundreds of prospective citizens, anxious to get in before the increased fees for both first and last naturalization papers go into effect July 1, have been taxing to the limit the naturalization bureau at Young's Hotel for the past 10 days.

The fees will in some cases be nearly doubled. Even though the present quarters of the bureau are as good, if not better, than the old the office has been unable to handle the crowds. Several hundred people, some of whom had been waiting practically all day, were turned away at the closing hour. So great has been the rush that the bureau ran out of intention blanks. Arthur D. Grandison, in charge, telegraphed to Washington an da new consignment is on the way.

ROMANTIC ADVENTURES -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Do They Love Each Other Is Important Point

TO each of us, our own adventures seem such rich interesting and important, as indeed they are to us! B. F. feels he has had an "adventurous and romantic life." Here is his story.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am writing this letter in the hope that you will enlighten me regarding the adventurous, romantic life I have thus far led.

"The story begins thus: When I was 22 and while I was on a visit to another state I fell in love with a young lady of my own social standing. We were much in love with one another but as time went on the mutual interest grew less. Then I fell in love with another young lady who now wishes to renew the correspondence—at least you thought at the time you were in love, although you soon became interested in someone else.

"Your doubts as to whether at the present time you are in love with her are entirely justified, since you have not seen her for more than three years. Nor can she be sure she loves you after all this time.

"Why do you not reply to her letter quite frankly, stating that you and she at least can be the best of friends and that you are delighted to think she wishes to renew the friendship.

"Then if you really feel attracted and interested, make it a point to visit the town where she lives while you are on your summer vacation. If you and she can meet each other find you can begin the friendship just where you left off well and good.

"Time and distance are powerful elements of your problem, my friend. They cannot be ignored. If you were to involve yourself in an engagement of marriage through correspondence alone, without seeing your former sweetheart, you might find yourself committed to a marriage that would not bring happiness to you or to her. So proceed slowly and wisely. Manage to see her frequently this summer and find whether intimate companionship will renew this glow of feeling you once had for her.

"Do not propose marriage to her for sentimental reasons alone, or because she is the means of a former romantic adventure of yours. The question at issue is, do you love each other now?

"If you and she become engaged let the engagement be moderately short—six months for instance. Long absence engagements are difficult for those who are susceptible to the influence of a fair face and figure that would not bring happiness to you or to her.

"Then and then alone can your love adventure proceed harmoniously and wisely, my friend, and culminate in successful, happy marriage.

FIND GOOD IN EVERYTHING

By LUCY LOWELL.

WE see what we look for; we hear what our ears are attuned to hearing.

The thing which dominates our own thought we discover in the thought of others; what we, ourselves, are we meet over and over.

We have heard it said that like attracts like, but to me that seems only a part of the fact. Like brings out like, since it is possible that something of all good and something of all that is not good is held within every created thing and person.

The point of this is that you are in position to dictate what you shall receive in your life, whether pleasant experiences or ill, whether the best of people or the worst.

The miner, searching for gold, tosses aside every piece of barren rock which comes to his hand without so much as a second glance. His consciousness is set to discover the golden threads which run through the bits of quartz he breaks, and the others, because he considers them worthless and so ignores them, do not exist for him. His quest is for gold; his vision is attuned to gold and for this reason he finds gold.

He might, of course, spend his time hunting worthless rock instead, just as we often waste precious days searching out the barren qualities in our fellow humans, thus making our own lives bare.

It is a fallacy to say, as sometimes we do, of anyone at all that there is not a bit of good in him, that he is wrong through and through and that search for any regenerating quality is useless.

There is no created thing but has some good some reason for being. And in the degree that we search for the good in the world-wide we bring into our thoughts dwell upon this and so, removing the obstructions of the rubbish of falsehood and smallness and disagreeableness which may all but cover it, do we open the way for worthiness within ourselves a chance to reach out and grow strong and beautiful.

FASHIONS

PLAIN COLORS FOR AFTERNOON WEAR

THE mid season fashions show little, if any, change in the established styles of 1929. The two afternoon frocks pictured here are characteristic of the mode, both showing points of femininity, of which the trimmed neckline is one.

The frock on the left is of dull grey-blue crepe satin. An interesting scarf collar develops into a one-sided bolero effect that is also the molded bipline which terminates in a sort of bow at the front.

The black chiffon frock at the right is charmingly youthful with its tiered skirt, and the organdie collar and cuffs lend a note of chic that is irresistible.

Plain colors are distinguished for afternoon wear, with black and white rather predominating. Crepe satins and chiffons are chosen because of their soft gracefulness, which lends itself admirably to intricate drapings and the popular tiers.

The trimmed neckline seems to have established a foothold on fashion's ladder again, for more and more are frocks being shown with collars and drapings of either self or contrasting materials. Organdie is combined with almost every material this season and gives a crisp, youthful touch to the most ordinary frock.

3-MINUTE JOURNEYS

By TEMPLE MANNING

IT is doubtful whether the Moroccan, Spanish and what-have-you shopkeepers of Gibraltar ever heard of P. T. Barnum, America's remarkable circus man, and his famous saying that One is born every minute." But, judging by the wide range in prices for certain articles to certain customers, it is a certainty they are of the same opinion.

At the shore end of the wharf at which the traveler lands are located the Moorish and Spanish markets. Gibraltar, of course, produces none of its own food supplies and every morning the Moors in their long, flowing robes sail across from Africa bearing loads of fowls and eggs. Meat, fruit and vegetables are imported mainly from Andalusia and the Spanish markets may be found lemons sweet enough to eat as one eats an orange, grapes and other typically Spanish fruits as well as all sorts of fresh green vegetables.

Just inside the city gates is the main square from the far side of which extends Waterport st., which runs parallel with the waterfront. This is Main st. of Gibraltar and practically all the other streets, too, for the crosses are merely passages leading up or down hill. As one walks along the waterfront and the Spanish markets may be found lemons sweet enough to eat as one eats an orange, grapes and other typically Spanish fruits as well as all sorts of fresh green vegetables.

Just inside the city gates is the main square from the far side of which extends Waterport st., which runs parallel with the waterfront. This is Main st. of Gibraltar and practically all the other streets, too, for the crosses are merely passages leading up or down hill. As one walks along the waterfront and Andalusia and the Spanish mar-

On Waterport st. are to be found almost all the shops and cafes. Most of the shops are run by the Moors, East Indians, Italians, Jews and other "foreigners" and they cater largely to the tourist trade. Standard goods for the inhabitants are sold by the English in shops which are truly a little bit of England.

On the rock are found a considerable number of Barbary apes. They have been there since remote times and their presence has baffled scientists since apes and monkeys are found in no other part of Europe outside of zoos. There are caverns in the rock, and legend says that the monkeys go through these caverns to an underground passage which leads under the straits to Africa. A fantastic tale, but for the time being, as good a way as any to explain the presence of the monkeys on European soil.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

A fine, robust soldier, after serving his country faithfully, became greatly reduced in weight owing to exposure and scanty rations, until he was so weak he could hardly stand. Consequently, he got leave of absence to go home and recuperate. He arrived at his home station looking very badly. Just as he stepped off the boat, one of his old friends rushed up to him and said:

"Well, well, Pat, I'm glad to see ye're back from the front."

Pat looked worried, and replied: "Begorra, I knew I was gettin' thin, but I never thought ye could see that much!"

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

PROVISION FOR NECESSARY DISCARDS

Auction Bidding: South bids one Club and North betters the bid with one Spade. East bids two Hearts. South supports Spades and West supports Hearts. North rebids Spades. East cannot go to four Hearts.

Contract Bidding: South bids one Club, showing 4 Probable Tricks; West passes. North bids one Spade, a betterment take-out showing 3½ to 4 Probable Tricks. East bids two Hearts defensively. South bids two Spades, showing four Probable Tricks in support of his partner's bid. West bids three Hearts, showing like support for Hearts. North bids three Spades, showing five Probable Tricks. East can bid no further. South gives his second assist, holding 5 Probable Tricks, bidding for game, four Spades.

The Play: Declarer, winning the first trick with the Ace of Hearts, takes two rounds of trumps, leaving the high Queen in Dummy, the Jack in his own hand, and the 10 outstanding. He then takes two Club tricks, but leads a low Club on the third round and ruffs it to provide for the possibility of four Clubs in one adverse hand, and to assure two discards on Clubs later.

While with the hand as held, Declarer required but one discard, that of a Heart, the Diamond distribution might have been such as to have caused him to lose four Diamond tricks. The discard of a Diamond absolutely limited his losses to three Diamond tricks. Having trumped the third round of Clubs with the Ace of Spades, Declarer by the lead of another trump puts Dummy in and secures his two discards.

BRIGHTEN HOME LIFE

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

HOME life is losing its attractiveness.

What has always been held to be the very bulwark of the nation is in serious danger of total extinction.

If one were to take New York city or any large American metropolis as typical of the entire country one would unhesitatingly predict that home life is going on without the family. Private houses are being torn down to make room for apartment dwellings. The rooms in apartments are getting smaller.

Where a family in old days required a half dozen rooms to be content, now it satisfies itself with three or four, or maybe two.

Modern apartments do not build kitchens any more. They build small, cramped kitchenettes. Apartments don't have separate dining rooms as much as formerly. The living and the dining room are often in one.

In country and rural districts the trend away from the old-fashioned home is not so marked, but even here, where there is plenty of land and cheaper rents, apartments of five and 10 stories are beginning to spring up.

The home has always been a veritable keystone of civilization.

And love of home, despite modern tendencies to squeeze the home within narrow limits, is such an ancient and venerated feeling that it is inconceivable that such a time-honored and hallowed institution is going to be thrown into the discard forever.

But to stem the tide of home destruction — something must be done about it!

Economic considerations will undoubtedly keep apartments popular and houses small. But even these tiny homes can be made real homes if atmosphere—home atmosphere—is put into them.

What really makes a home is neither mother, father, brothers or sisters, nor furnishings, nor the walls nor the size.

Home atmosphere makes the home!

Just what that asmosphere is, is a difficult thing to say. Washington Irving called it "a settled repose of affection in the domestic scene."

As any rate, home atmosphere cannot be created overnight. If you change your place of abode frequently, you lose it.

The passage of years, the growth of associations, help primarily to make a home what it should be. Make your home a reflection and expression of yourself! That is home atmosphere!

Give thought and loving care to the rooms that make your house, no matter how small and cramped, and you will instinctively create home atmosphere in spite of yourself.

An attractive home atmosphere is really a health necessity.

Those who do not care for their homes are likely to be restless and dissatisfied. They have some kind of a room or set of rooms in which to hang their hat, sleep, and be protected from the elements. That, however, is about all!

They have no place to relax in, to commune with themselves, no place to love, no place where the very furniture and other inanimate objects take on actual living personality.

Get atmosphere into your home life and your home will become one of your most highly-prized possessions.

GELATINE DESSERTS

WITH July almost here, it is time for the busy housewife to turn her attention to those "hot weather" dessert dishes which may be prepared in the cool of early morning.

Summer desserts should be of the most delicate ingredients. They should be light—and be not concentrated—not high in fat—not difficult to digest, and not too much of a mixture. They should be readily and quickly prepared. They should preferably be of a kind which is served cold.

The best type is that which may be made in the cool hours of early morning and stored in the refrigerator, available for lunch or dinner. And they should appeal to the eye by means of texture, color or garnish.

Do try some of the attractive gelatin desserts that I have for you today

GELATIN LEMON PIE

½ c. lemon juice
1½ c. sugar
2 eggs.
½ c. cold water
1½ c. boiling water.
Salt
1 tbsp. gelatin

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water after soaking in cold water 5 minutes. Add lemon juice. Beat egg yolks till thick, add half the sugar. Slowly add ½ of the lemon juice to double boiler and rest of sugar. Cook stirring constantly until mixture is blended and begins to thicken. Cool. Whip until stiff enough to hold its shape and pour into pastry shell already baked. Cover with beaten egg white, sweetened, brown quickly in oven. Chill thoroughly.

LEMON SPONGE

½ c. lemon juice.
¾ c. sugar.
½ c. cold water.
1 c. boiling water.
Whites of 2 eggs.
Small pinch salt.
1 tbsp. gelatin.

First soak gelatin in cold water about 5 minutes, dissolve in boiling water, add sugar, lemon juice and grated rind of 1 lemon. Chill until quite thick, then beat with wire spoon until frothy; add whites of eggs beaten stiff and continue beating until heavy enough to hold its shape. Turn into wet mold and chill in refrigerator. May be served with custard sauce or whipped cream.

COCOANUT CUSTARD JELLY

3 eggs.
Scant ½ c. sugar
1 tbsp. gelatin.
1 tsp. vanilla.
¼ tsp. salt.
1 c. shredded cocoanut.

Dissolve gelatin in milk in double boiler and add sugar. Beat yolks of eggs slightly and stir slowly into milk, stirring constantly, and cook until somewhat thick. Stir continually while cooking to keep smooth. Remove from stove, add cocoanut, salt and flavoring, then add whites of eggs beaten very stiff. Pour into large mold or individual molds, first wetting, and place in refrigerator till firm. When ready to serve there will be a jelly on the bottom and custard on top.

STRAWBERRY ICE BOX CAKE

1 c. strawberries.
2-3 c. sugar.
1 tbsp. lemon juice.
1 tbsp. gelatin.
2 tbsps. cold water.
¼ c. boiling water.
1 c. whipped cream.
2 doz. ladyfingers.

Mash the strawberries and put through a sieve. Add the sugar and lemon juice. Soften the gelatin in cold water, dissolve in boiling water, and add to the strawberry mixture. Chill until partially thickened, then fold in ½ c cream which has been whipped until stiff. Line the bottom and sides of a mold with ladyfingers. Fill with alternate layers of the strawberry mixture and ladyfingers. Let stand in refrigerator for several hours. Just before serving cover with the rest of the cream, whipped and sweetened. Serves eight.

GIRL'S DAINTY ROOM

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

AN ingenious mother of a four-year-old child showed me a nursery the other day in which was incorporated an idea so interesting that I feel it is worth passing on to other mothers.

The little girl's room was papered in a blue color, and on one side at about three and a half feet above the floor ran a strip of wood with a groove opening up. About ten inches above this was another strip with a groove faced down.

"What is that for?" inquired the little girl in answer to my question, "Oh, that is our story-book strip." And so it was.

The mother saved all the cardboard strips which came from the laundry inside the collar bands. Then in the late afternoon, that period which mothers recognize as the trying hour of the day, the child went through old magazines and cut out large colored pictures which showed activities similar to those she had enjoyed during the day, and pasted one or more on each cardboard, according to the size of the pictures.

A large pink and white birthday cake adorned with candles covered one strip and it was explained that it had been Father's birthday. The next card held a picture of a bag of golf clubs and golf balls, showing what Father had received for a birthday gift. A ride out into the country was shown on the big cards in pictures of green meadows, cows, horses, grain growing and a lovely print of colored apple blossoms.

"What do you do with the cards when the strip gets all filled up?" I asked.

The little girl's eyes grew round "Oh, we make books!" she announced, disgusted with such an unimaginative guest.

So the books were brought out; one for each month. The cards were uniform in size, so they gratefully lent themselves to the idea of making monthly scrap-books, holes being punched in each and a heavy cord serving to hold the pages loosely together. These books were a source of great interest and pride to the small girl, who got them out often when she was alone, to review her activities of the month or so previous. She also enjoyed hugely showing them to her small friends, telling them the story of the ride or the birthday cake, or the train journey, or the advent of the new doll into her family.

It is an idea which will give a small child many interesting hours. If you do not own your home, I think it could even be carried out in an apartment without damage to the walls. Two plain strips of wood could be carefully put at the side of one wall, the small holes filled with putty and quickly revarished upon moving, leaving no scars nor damage to the walls. The grooves are easier to fit pictures into, but not necessary. If the boards are put up with very few nails or screws there will be play enough to allow the insertion of cardboard strips, and your child will derive enough pleasure and education from the activity to compensate for your small outlay of time and material.

After the picture had been pasted on, the cards were inserted between the two wooden strips on the wall

A SIX-DAY STORY

How Love Saved Woman From Clutches of Crooks

CHAPTER 5

MRS HOLT searched in her bag with trembling fingers. "I have this, too," she said, and gave Joyce a man's gold signet ring set with a carnelian. "Charlie was wearing that when he came to us," she added.

Joyce bit her lip. "Yes, it's his ring, and his monogram," she said. "I remember the ring quite well. He always wore it."

Whatever small hopes Jeff might have had that Charles Holt was not Charles Nesbit were shattered, for Joyce's recognition of the ring put the matter beyond doubt.

As for Joyce, she had laid the ring back on the table beside which Mrs. Holt was sitting and was deep in thought, trying desperately to remain calm. What was she to do? If she claimed her husband, she wrecked this poor woman's life and—what was almost worse—branded her child as illegitimate.

On the other hand, if she gave up her claim to Charlie, she must also abandon his fortune, to which, after all, she had no right if he was alive. She would be left with just enough to live in a third-rate boarding house, or in a cottage like Jeff's. That seemed a very small thing now, troubled her scarcely at all.

Jeff—that was the cruellest blow of all, for now unless she got a divorce from Charlie she could never marry Jeff. And to get a divorce meant publicity which would be ruin to this poor little woman who had come so far out of her way to do what she considered to be her duty. Whichever way she looked at it, whatever she did, Joyce saw her own life wrecked and happiness made impossible for her.

"Don't take him from me!" she begged "for my baby's sake, if not for mine."

"What do you want me to do?" asked Joyce. "You know, I suppose, that my husband is a rich man."

Mrs. Holt stretched her hands with a passionate gesture. "I don't want his money, if only I can have him. And I believe he's happier now than he's ever been before. Forgive me for saying that, but I know it's true. I can support him. I've done it up till now. I couldn't ask you to give up his fortune, even if I wanted it—why should you? It's just a cruel trick that fate has played on us."

Joyce, though very pale was quite composed again. "I am going to do what I think he should do," she said firmly. "I feel I can't take him from you. I who believed him dead. I'm going to provide for you and for your child with his money. After all it is his—not mine. You shall have five thousand inside twenty-four hours."

"Five thousand pounds—twenty-five thousand dollars!" gasped Mrs. Holt in an awed voice.

Mrs. Holt got up quickly and caught Joyce's hands in hers. "You are the kindest, most generous woman I have ever met," she cried. "I don't want all his money or yours, but for Lucy's sake I will take the five thousand."

Jeff saw that Joyce had as much as she could stand. She was at the breaking-point. He turned to Mrs. Holt.

"If you will come back tomorrow evening you shall have the money," he said.

"But where is she to stay?" asked Joyce.

"Don't trouble about that" said Mrs Holt quietly. "I am engaged a lodging in the village."

It was raining next evening when Jeff picked Joyce up. All day he had been busy on Joyce's account. In the afternoon Jeff had returned and fetched the money in notes.

"I see you've got the money, Sir," he said.

Joyce looked troubled and Jeff tried to console her.

"Don't look so worried Joyce dear," he begged. "After all, you cared nothing for Nesbit. And surely it's much better that this woman should look after him than that you should have him on your hands."

"Yes—oh, Jeff, I am not wanting Charlie back. But the whole thing is such a shock. The knowledge that he has been alive all the time. And—and that poor little woman. She married him in all good faith and now finds that her child is—nameless"

The door opened "Mrs. Holt, madam," said Dench.

Joyce went quickly across and took both her hands, with a sudden, swelling kindness.

"I have the money for you," she said. She took the thick package of bank notes which Jeff had brought and handed it to Mrs Holt.

The little woman looked at it with a sort of awe. "It's a terrible lot of money," she said.

"I shall want your home address," added Joyce "as I told you, all Charlie's money must go back to him. The lawyers will have to arrange that."

Mrs. Holt stared at her, hesitated and finally shook her head decisively.

"He won't take it, Mrs Nesbit, and if he would I wouldn't let him. This insurance money is more than plenty for all of us and its all that we can take."

"I can't take that for an answer," said Joyce firmly. "This thing has got to be settled as I wish it. I must have the address, please."

Jeff gave her one and pencil and she wrote the address in a small, neat hand. Then she picked up her bag. "And now I'll thank you very kindly, Mrs. Nesbit, and be going."

Suddenly she broke down and hurled her face in her hands, sobbing almost hysterically.

"Oh, gentlemen, be good to me—so good to me!" How can I thank you?" she gale brokenly

Jeff, only too glad that the interview was over, opened the door for Mrs. Holt. As he did so, Dench came across the hall. There was a queer half smile on his thin lips which puzzled Jeff.

"Suppose you give me that bag?" he said to Mrs Holt

"Are you mad?" she asked.

Dench grinned. "Not me—but no matter. I'll be answered drily. "It seems a pity to spoil one of the smartest little plants I ever saw worked. I'ut let me tell you right here, Weeping Dolly, you don't get by with this."

Mrs. Holt turned to Jeff.

"What does this man mean?" she demanded. Her brimming eyes shone with amazement and indignation

Jeff was so dumbfounded he did not know what to say.

He turned to Mrs. Holt.

"Hand it over, my dear. You're not going to be done and pencil and she wrote the address in a small, neat hand. Then she picked up her bag. "And now I'll thank you very kindly, Mrs. Nesbit, and be going."

Suddenly she broke down and hurled her face in her hands, sobbing almost hysterically.

"Oh, gentlemen, be good to me—so good to me!" How can I thank you?" she gale brokenly

Jeff, only too glad that the interview was over, opened the door for Mrs. Holt. As he did so, Dench came across the hall. There was a queer half smile on his thin lips which puzzled Jeff.

"Suppose you give me that bag?" he said to Mrs Holt

"Are you mad?" she asked.

Dench grinned. "Not me—but no matter. I'll be answered drily. "It seems a pity to spoil one of the smartest little plants I ever saw worked. I ut let me tell you right here, Weeping Dolly, you don't get by with this."

Mrs. Holt turned to Jeff.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

JOYCE NESBIT, an attractive young widow living near Dartmoor prison, meets Jeff Ballard, an American. Joyce has bought Deeping Royal, his old home Two distant relatives by marriage, Grant and Philip Dalton, father and son, are taking care of her fortune. Jeff sizes up the men as crooks. Joyce orders them to get out. Jeff tells her if she were poor he would marry her; she persuades him to become engaged to her as a means of protection. In a file of convicts passing Joyce recognizes a man named Dench. One of two escaped convicts holds up her car.

She is rescued by another escaped convict who proves to be Dench, once her dead husband's valet. She passes him off as her butler. The Daltons recognize him, but he amazes them by recognizing them, too, as crooks, and threatens to send them to jail if they give him away. They are after Joyce's money and take him into partnership, the elder Dalton telling his son that if Dench gets troublesome there's one sure way to stop him. Dalton tells Joyce he has evidence her husband is not dead. He gets £200 for expenses. She gives it to him. Dench holds him up and takes half.

A Mrs. Holt appears who says she's from the States and the wife of Capt. Nesbit, who married under the name of Holt. She produces proofs, including photographs, that convince Joyce she is speaking the truth.

(Now Go On With the Story.)

Jeff followed with Joyce, and Dench closed the door

Joyce spoke. "Now, Jenkins," she said coldly, "I will ask you to explain this extraordinary conduct."

Is it extraordinary that I don't want to see my employer robbed of five thousand pounds?" Suggested Dench.

"There is no question of robbery The money is a free gift to Mrs Holt."

"Just so, ma'am, only this lady's name doesn't happen to be Holt."

The girl turned quickly to Joyce. "You know who I am, Mrs. Nesbit You've seen the photograph and this ring and everything. Tell this man to let me go."

She Lim the photograph, Mrs Holt," she said

"Let it!" said the indignant girl "It is in my bag"

Dench opened the bag and found the envelope containing the photograph

"Well," said Joyce quietly. "Is not that Captain Nesbit?"

Dench looked up "No ma'am, he replied with decision, "that is not Captain Nesbit."

"Then who is it?" she asked

"I'd say it was Johnny Crowle, ma'am. He's this young woman's husband."

"I—I don't understand," said Joyce helplessly "She said she had married Charles Nesbit who now calls himself Holt and you call him Jones—Crowle

"In this picture Johnny's made up to resemble Captain Lyston in the uniform of the Royal Artillery, and Joyce "I shall let you know what I decide to do. The whole thing is a frame up a plot by Dalton to skin you It's what he went to town for"

"But how are we to get home from Wyming?" objected Joyce pointing to Mrs. Holt.

Dench permitted himself to smile slightly. "She's never been nearer Wyoming than she is this minute. London's her home and Johnny Crowle is her husband She's a crook, ma'am, just like Dalton, only a bit cleverer Weeping Dolly the call her, or Dolly the Pitcher, and—as you've seen for yourself since a mighty clever actress. Her strong suit is the pathetic stunt."

Her husband Johnny Crowle is a small part time actor with a talent for make up. Give him a photograph and he'll copy the original closely enough to deceive the devil himself That's what he's done in this case."

"But where did Grant Dalton get the photograph?" demanded Joyce

"That was easy, ma'am, out of your album."

Joyce looked at Dench and then at Weeping Dolly Her face was white and set and she bit hard on the eyes of a hunted animal

"It's dreadful" said Joyce—"as fearful to think of a girl like that lending herself to such a scheme"

"How did you get wise to Dalton's trick?" asked Jeff

"You sent the telegram for me didn't you?"

"Oh! the one to Mike Logan?"

"That's it, Sir, and Mike, who's a very good friend of mine, shadowed Dalton in town and reported to me that he was in touch with Weeping Dolly and a film study After that—well it was simple."

Joyce looked at Weeping Dolly, but the sheer blind terror depicted on her face was sufficient proof She shuddered

"What are we going to do with her?" she asked

"You can hand her over to the police for attempt to defraud ma'am" said Dench "Your evidence and Mike Blythe's would be plenty to convict her It would be a useful morning's work."

She turned to the wretched Mrs Crowle

What did Grant Dalton pay you to try this wicked trick?" she asked

Dolly looked up Her piteous face was wet with tears

"He didn't pay me anything except my expenses, but he promised me charity in every bundle

It was one of the hottest, stickiest days that either of them ever remembered. Here they were, in one of the wonder spots of the world, not seeing an inch beyond the hotel windows. Surrounded with every luxury, they were bored to enjoy it. Aunt Ellie spoke vaguely of "making a tour of the valley" in a sight-seeing bus presumably, a little later, but for the present the spacious veranda, with its comfortable rockers, was more to her liking.

Here, in the warm, dry air, she rocked and crocheted, and comfortably complained

"It's robbery what they charge here. I don't know what's come over me. I was never one for this vacation nonsense. A body can be just as comfortable at home. More so. And when I felt the bed I knew I wouldn't sleep. The food isn't so much either. Filling but not nourishing. You mark my words, but it doesn't do you any good I wonder if they'll have turkey for dinner? What time is it, Louise?"

Only four o'clock? I suppose tea is extra. Just go in and inquire, Nancy. . . . NANCY! Inquire—don't order . . . it, unless it is included. Just inquire. . . . Do you think she understood" Go after her, Louise. I don't want to spend money for tea unless it . . . . Hurry! Shell it if it ordered"

That was about the only time they got away from the suite together. One, or the other, preferably both, had to sit right there and rock and listen.

Nancy wriggled and twisted like a schoolgirl, eyes expectantly fixed on the door, the road, the laughing groups that came and went. Impossible that they didn't know a soul! That not one of their friends was registered. . . .

Not a word from Jack Reamer, either Too soon for a letter, but could telephone. Still, one had to be careful . . . Anita could make it very uncomfortable if she wanted to. . . . I suppose she was named as correspondent. . . .

That nightmare thought sent a chill right down to the tips of the new scarlet pumps . . . mama . . . the newspapers . . . what would people think". "Oh, dear, I was never meant for an adventurer. I almost wish I'd never met Jack . . . at least until he had got his divorce. But then someone else would have snapped him up. . . . Oh, if mama were only like other mothers, good at managing! Like Mrs. Craig. She's just practically nailed Gil Neal for May Belle. May Belle never has to do a thing but look innocent.

"But if I sit back and wait for things to happen, I'll end like Louise, or worse than that, because I haven't got Lou's disposition . . . poor Lou, she is a humbug if she had the right clothes she can't get by with trash like I can. . . . And in spite of herself Nancy brightened and preened a little because her home-made white georgette was effective, and every paterfamilias who passed found an excuse for lingering to give her a second look.

But Louise, who lacked Nancy's natural buoyancy of spirit, was dead tired even before the morning's dreams. She saw themselves just as they really were, poor relations penned to the side of a grotesque old person who had brought herself and them here just to spite a sick husband. Hospital indeed! If Joseph was going to insist on Louise's staying to that nonsense from Lake Bynion, Aunt Ellie would show him she needed a rest cure, too. He wouldn't be the only one to spend money foolishly, if he did say so himself She had picked out a most expensive place she could think of and had brought her fingers to help run up the bill

So here they were, eating and sleeping and sitting within the public view of the hotel while flowers bloomed—patches of gold and purple and scarlet—near enough to smell them on the soft little wind that came down from the mountains

How comfortable a home as any man ever had." Aunt Ellie's cracked, whining voice went right on, boring acidly into Louise's thoughts, "and the best mattress in the market. Curly white hair picked over once a year, mind you, and he prefers a hospital cot! So I said to myself, 'Well, Joseph Wyatt, I said, 'if it's money you want to spend I can help you, same as I've helped you save all these years . . . .

"Yes, Aunt Ellie" And, watching one khaki clad, laughing group after another mount sturdy mules and range, sure footed mountain horses and go riding off into the hazy distance, Louise felt, more poignantly than ever before, that life was indeed going off without her. Here, with beauty, adventure rumored almost within reach . . . her finger tips, she had to sit rocking on a porch with an old lady her very muscles ached with cramped longing. her dun feet planted so firmly and precisely in their neat brown slippers, itched to go. She wanted to run, to scream, to end panting after every laughing, outgoing party with slickers and lunches strapped on their saddles "Wait—wait for me! Take me—take me, too!"

But, being Louise, unaccustomed to giving way to mad longings, she sat, a pleasant enough picture in her rose colored linen and black satiny brown hair, rocking on the veranda, being "nice" to Aunt Ellie. Exerting herself to be all that, so that Aunt Ellie would not notice that when a dusty, ranging, with twinkling blue eyes stamped

Love in the Spring -:- Interesting Short Story -:- By Jack Woodford

THE young man was lugubrious. "Why shouldn't he be? It was a lovely spring day. The flowers were in bloom somewhere; one could sense it by the air which swept over from the Jersey side, across the Hudson.

Everywhere new automobiles were to be seen smashing into each other, while little children played in the streets, affectionately curtsying and striking each other.

He entered the little store around the corner for the thousandth time Approached the lovely girl behind the counter

"Aw, Marge" he begged. "Lay off! Two whole days of my vacation gone, and we haven't been anywhere yet."

"No!" she declared. "I'm willing to admit that I'm a failure as a shopkeeper, and I'll be glad when it's all over and we're married and settled down; but I'm going to stay right here until I've sold out my stock—so that's that."

"But you'll never sell it," he mourned, "on a side street off the main stem like this. Nobody ever comes in but a few people on the street at a time. You'll be stuck here all summer."

"Then," she returned firmly, "we won't be married until fall."

The store was a neighborhood cesspool. Magazines, soda, cigars, cigarettes, pipes, handkerchiefs, a few ties, gloves, candy, ice cream, sodas and other kinds of snacks she had supposed people of the neighborhood would wish to buy, to save them the trouble of walking a long way to other stores.

But somehow they just never saw the little store around the corner. In order to break even and quit square with the world she simply had to sell a large portion of the remaining stock. She had marked nearly everything down to cost price; people would then see, she knew if only their attention could be attracted to the marked down prices in the window. . . . But people who did pass, seeing the amazingly low prices, came in and bought—but it looked, indeed, as though she'd have to wait all the summer, if it were left to these casuals to take her stock off her hands.

As we have noted previously, it was spring. Spring is a time of inspiration. Poets create their verses in spring Lambs gambol right heartedly. A quickening of life comes over all Suddenly it touched the young man. He stopped still in his walk with the stupendousness of the idea that had come to him Presently he turned and went back.

When he came out he wore a smile as of the peace that passeth understanding.

He fairly skipped and hopped as he walked along now. Presently another thought struck him. He went into yet another drug store, and emerged with a broad grin.

It seemed to him now that the sun had never shined more brightly, and that the world had never been so beautiful; even the world of cement and stone that is New York.

And all morning, even all afternoon, his inspirations kept coming to him; and, each time he was seized with a new inspiration he entered another drug store, or cigar store, always on a different street, and soon removed from the last cigar store or drug store he had entered

At last when night fell, he took a cab and returned to the little store around the corner.

The shelves were denuded. The counters were empty. The cash register was full. Margaret was almost in bysteics But she was not unhappy.

"All right," she laughed. "You win Bill we married tomorrow, and spend the rest of your vacation honeymooning."

The young man kissed her. What is more, he kissed her again and again and again. Not only this but he danced a not ha'f bad jig upon the floor.

"It was like a miracle," she told him happily. "I can't understand how any one engines inspired up they thought the whole block was in flames.

Then there was the whole fire fighting squadron of the police department; they send there was a gang war going on.

"And then there were ambulances —and in the afternoon more police-men—and finally the newspapers reported that the street raved in; there were reporters from all the papers. And then the men from the zoological gardens were looking for an escaped lion that had been seen in the vicinity—and oh, ever so many things, and crowds—oh! you never saw such crowds!

"How queer," breathed the young man, happily.

Correct Manners -:- By Mrs. Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When eating fish and any of the small bones get into the mouth with the fish, should they be removed with the fork or with the fingers? I have always removed fish bones from the mouth with the fingers because I find the fork most awkward for that purpose I was told that the fork should be used for this purpose and not the fingers If it is permissible to handle a chicken bone with the fingers, I should think it would be permissible to handle fish bones with the fingers.

M. C.

You were right in your judgment as to the best, because most convenient and least attention-calling, method of removing a bone from the mouth. The fork should not be used. The bone should be removed, as unobtrusively as possible, of course, with the thumb and first finger. (And, by the way, it is not permissible to "handle a chicken bone with the fingers.) The napkin and fork should be used, and not the fingers.)

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Will you please tell me who should be seated at the head of the bridal table? Some people think the bride and groom, or the person of the bride, with the bride on the right and the groom on the left, and some say if there are priests present they should be placed at the head.

2. Is it appropriate for the whole bridal party to have their photographs taken, or is it not being done?

3. Is it correct to have four bridesmaids in the bridal party without ushers?

A READER.

If there is only one table, the bride and groom sit together at one side of the table and the bride's mother, who is the hostess of the occasion, sits opposite. The bride sits on the right of the groom; whether there is a special bridal table, or whether she has bridal party and guests all at one table.

On the right of the bride's mother sits the groom's father, since he is the man guest of honor. The priest or clergyman or whoever performs the ceremony sits on the left of the bride's mother. On the right of the bride's father is the groom's mother, the youngest guest of honor.

2. This is as the bride wishes. Sometimes, usually indeed, the bride and groom have their photograph taken together, and then with the members of their wedding party.

3. Yes, if the bride and groom wish this. But a bridal party of this size would indicate a formal, rather large wedding, and this kind of wedding needs ushers to seat the guests.

STOCK VALUE DETERMINED BY EARNINGS

With millions of Americans now owning securities and their value in the corporate business into billions of dollars, a background of facts for their investments has become essential to the people of the United States generally. Huch Bancroft, president of Dow, Jones & Company and publisher of Barron's, the Boston News Bureau and the Philadelphia Financial Journal declared in an address delivered over the radio last night as guest speaker on the Halsey, Stuart & Co. radio program.

The background, Mr. Bancroft said, could be obtained by reading the well-edited financial pages of the general and financial press for the essential underlying facts that determine values rather than from the surface news which may or may not have a temporary effect on prices.

"As you look through the stock and bond table," Mr. Bancroft advised, "make a point to look at the range of seasoned securities as well as those that may be important in the limelight of those you happen to own.

Prices in the long run Mr. Bancroft said, are determined by values which in turn are determined by earnings. Earnings statements he said, should be read in connection with the accounts for the corresponding period of the previous year as most companies show seasonal variations.

Other items which Mr. Bancroft advised watching included earnings, one of the most significant business indexes and one which should also be compared with the previous year; the money market, with special reference to time money and commercial paper rates; the Federal Reserve statement, and the export and import movement of gold; and commodity prices.

The course of commodity prices has a profound effect on security prices, both general and specific, he continued. As commodity prices rise a given amount of money will buy more things. Therefore fixed income bearing securities, which mean a rise in call or an explorer or nothing in particular to the average American. When the company was formed Marquette meant a motor car, built by Buick, to literally millions of people in America. The company could not have been obtained in an equal length of time by any method except advertising regardless of how much money was spent. And the new product could not have been successfully introduced without that knowledge on the part of the general public.

In closing, Mr. Bancroft stressed the importance of reading the financial advertising of the nation as a whole, offered the surest and quickest way, in his opinion, of gaining a practical financial education.

What Would Happen to Us If Advertising Stopped?

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, June 28.—What kind of life would we lead if all advertising stopped?

We would grope around as if in darkness and would be deprived of much that we now enjoy.

Who has advertising grown to? Only 10 years ago $150 million a year advertising appropriation fully-million dollar expenditures were uncommon and the billion dollar a year advertising era was counted on the fingers of one hand. Today so many accounts exceed five million dollars a year. Several exceed 10 million dollars.

Will this growth go on?

When in Detroit the other day I discussed this subject with Henry T. Ewald, president of the Campbell Ewald Company, one of the biggest agencies in the world, supervising the spending of many millions for General Motors, United States Rubber, Burroughs and other industrial leaders.

"Purchasing intelligently is a big economic factor in modern life," said Ewald, "we can look forward to a continued expansion of its use. Advertising is as much a part of modern business as power. Just as executives have discovered that manufacturing costs are reduced by the use of power, they find that selling costs are reduced by the use of advertising.

"For example, several hundred thousand dollars were recently spent in advertising to introduce the new General Motors car, the Marquette Six. The day before the campaign started the word 'Marquette' meant a river in a city or an explorer or nothing in particular to the average American. When the campaign was finished Marquette meant a motor car, built by Buick, to literally millions of people in America. The company could not have been obtained in an equal length of time by any method except advertising regardless of how much money was spent. And the new product could not have been successfully introduced without that knowledge on the part of the general public.

"The average man is interested in people. He gets no thrill out of inanimate things. Yet last December millions of people went in a single day to see an inanimate object—the new Chevrolet Six. Advertising did it. Without advertising not 50,000 people would have gone and it would have been months before the country at large knew anything about it.

If you don't think that advertising is a fundamental of modern life, imagine what would happen if all advertising were to be eliminated overnight. You would put on a collar which didn't carry its maker's name and it probably would scratch your neck. You would shave with soap from an unmarked tube and your face doubtless would be irritated. You would drink unpedigreed coffee and it wouldn't be good to the last drop.

"Your newspaper would be a badly printed sheet containing only the barest news, because advertising revenue is responsible for the completeness of the modern newspaper. You would go to work in a nameless automobile and you wouldn't drive with confidence. If you wanted to buy a pocketknife you would have no way of locating a hardware store except by seeing hardware displayed in a window.

"Throughout the day and every succeeding day every purchase you made would be a blind purchase. And with almost no exceptions, everything you bought would be of poor quality, for manufacturers would have no incentive to make a high quality article because you would have no way of knowing the maker, and hence no way of going back and becoming a repeat buyer. There would not be a single object to which you could point and say, 'I want that because I know the company which makes it and I believe that it will give me my money's worth.' There would be no such thing as the business faith, which is stronger than a written guarantee. There would be no public goodwill, which causes a man to lay down his money, confident that he will get full value in return.

"We would all be going around in a daze, sure. We would have nothing to which we could pin our faith. We would have no confidence in anything except that which was made and sold by our intimate friends.

"Naturally, business would stagnate."

Of the future Ewald declared "In the next decade America's production is going to reach unprecedented heights. And we are going to see the use of advertising in direct proportion. Because advertising is the most economical way of getting that increased production consumed."

Advertising has entered into our daily life more than we have ever stopped to analyze, has it not?

Views of Wall Street

BLOCK of Chicago Northwestern which had been outstanding the market for weeks has finally been absorbed and strong interests are understood to have become large-scale buyers of the stock. The Northwestern is one of the leading rails, from an income and dividend prospect standpoint. The first five months of this year showed an increase of 49 per cent. in surplus earnings, the equivalent of 46 cents per share of common. The present dividend could easily be increased, in view of prospective $7 earnings for 1929.

CONTINENTAL CAN finally responded to the persistent assertion of its friends that the stock is entitled to sell on a closer basis with American Can. It was pointed out that Continental is showing steady progress in earnings, with prospects that this year earnings should run about $6 a share after liberal improvement expenses. The current year should also disclose the commencement of benefits from Continental's development and expansion program, with resultant economies.

RUTTER & CO. IN MERGER

The combining of a 75-year-old New York investment house—including membership on the New York Stock Exchange with one specializing in government, municipal and public utility bonds will be completed Monday with Rutter & Co. This marks another forward step by Rutter Co. in expanding out its investment service.

The firm of L. D. & E. White—predecessor of White & Blackwell was founded in 1854 and at that time specialized in uncurrent "money of the banks." In 1904 the firm name was changed to White & Blackwell. L. D. White is today the oldest active member of the New York Stock Exchange has and purchased his seat for $22,000.

Rutter & Co. has specialized in government, municipal, railroad and public utility bonds. Recently considerable attention has been given to insurance stocks, several of which have been underwritten by the firm. SAVE $6 A TON ON OLD GOLD MINING IDEA

An average saving of six dollars a ton results from application of a cold acid-mining idea, water forced through high-pressure nozzles in cleaning the sand cores of castings for automatic machinery made by the Bullard Company in Bridgeport, Connecticut. The new use for the old method is announced today as a process of definitely proven value, following a year of operation, accompanied by marked economies and much greater output.

Water pressure of 425 pounds per square inch, 450 gallons of water a minute are forced through small nozzles, and quickly wash out the sand cores around which the metal is cast. On some difficult jobs, the casings by this method are spectacular. From a four-ton casting with 34 cubic feet of internal cored space and only two or three small outside openings, the sand core is now removed in two hours. The commonly accepted method of picking out the hard-baked sand with hand tools takes 35 to 40 hours of dusty and disagreeable work.

On the average casting, the time for core-removal is cut to one-fourth, and the cost is reduced 25 per cent.

The idea for the hydraulic washing was given to E. P. Bullard, president of the company, by the late Frank Smith. He was one of a group who, some 30 years ago, turned high-pressure hose on the great open pits of the Comstock mines outside Little Hope. In six hours, they washed into the gully a scrapheap it had taken 49 years of dry mining to build up and they recovered considerable gold that had been left by earlier miners. Mr. Bullard cites this development as typical of modern industry's readiness to accept, and adapt, ideas which have their inception in far different situations.

Favorable Weather Aid to Wheat Crops

Pres. Donnelly of Northern Pacific says "Conditions of crops in our territory is good. Wheat acreage is probably somewhat less than last year. Crop production in our territory this year should compare well with 1928. As we have had heavy rains this month, moisture conditions are good.

"The law just signed by President Hoover in regard to disposition of 2,000,000 acres held under land grant by Northern Pacific is favorable to the road, as we have always contended ownership of this land must be determined by the courts.

Under the law just passed the government will probably bring a condemnation suit to recover the land for its forest reserves and in which the compensation to Northern Pacific for the acreage will be determined."

Bright Future Seen for N. Y. Central

"Earnings outlook for New York Central this year continues very good," said President Patrick E. Crowley before sailing on the U S Berengaria. "Indications seem to point to a much improved showing over 1928."

"Current net income is running ahead of the same period a year ago and for the quarter ending June 30 net earnings should be fully as good if not better than the preceding three months," Mr. Crowley said.

Commenting upon the possibility of Central forming a holding company for various controlled properties, Mr. Crowley stated that nothing of this nature was contemplated, that Central already had the New York Central Securities Co., which met all the Central's requirements.

SEABOARD RY. MATURITIES MUST BE PAID

The problem of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company at the moment is not primarily that of having earnings sufficient to meet fixed charges, but rather the necessity of providing funds for the substantial debt maturities of the early future, particularly those of 1930 and 1931, says Robert L. Nutt, chairman of the board, in a letter to holders of the common and preferred stocks and 5 per cent adjustment bonds.

Mr. Nutt points out the danger that the encouraging increase in operating revenues being reported by the company may cause the holders of the company's adjustment bonds to believe a continuation of this increase so assures the road's prosperity as to remove the need of consummating the beneficial plan proposed under the reorganization plan. A careful consideration of the pertinent facts, he indicates, will show this to be a mistaken attitude.

"The company has reported an increase in gross operating revenues for each month since and including November, 1928, as compared with the corresponding 12 months previous," the letter states.

"The increase amounted to $1,132,-000 in the nine months ended April 30, 1929, and will be further augmented by May figures. The progress and continued improvement is distinctly encouraging as indicating that 1928 results are likely to prove to have been the low point in the severe recession in revenues which characterized 1927 and 1928 operations and that the company is now substantially on the way back toward recovery of previous gross revenues. As such revenues increase, a continuing larger proportion should flow thereafter to net income available for fixed charges."

Urging adjustment bondholders to facilitate consummation of the plan by depositing their securities promptly, Mr. Nutt says there can be no question that the desirable method of solving the problem of early debt maturities is to eliminate the adjustment bonds by exchanging them for other securities to provide not less than $7,500 000 from the sale of common stock and to arrange for the extension of substantial debt maturities, all of which are provided under the plan.

"The company," he adds, "has been able to arrange the extension of maturity of $13,229,208 principal debt now falling due from 1930 to 1935 inclusive only conditional upon the consummation of the plan. The relief to be obtained by this extension is vital both from the standpoint of facilitating the financing of the considerable remaining maturities to be funded during this period and of affording the company a better opportunity satisfactorily to develop the possibilities of its properties."

Increase in Orders of Car & Foundry

In the American Car & Foundry Co. annual report President Woodin says in early months of year ended April 30, 1929, equipment business was light but in later months there was some improvement in demand. The company entered the present fiscal year with unfilled orders approximately 50 per cent in excess of corresponding period of preceding year.

"We are increasing its activities in manufacture of miscellaneous products, that branch now being of substantial importance and producing a substantial portion of earnings, Mr. Woodin reported Progress is manifest in manufacture of motor buses, motor trucks and motor-driven rail cars.

"It would seem," he continued, "that the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the (so-called) 'Bluefield' case will have a favorable effect upon the general railroad situation, and that, as one of its results, there should be a stimulation of the interest of the railroads in the acquiring of new equipment."

New England Trust Opens New Back Bay Building

The new building at 99 Newbury st. for the New England Trust Company Back Bay Branch is officially opened for business today. While this bank had a branch office in the Back Bay for a number of years, it has never had its own building, specially constructed for banking purposes, instead. The New England Trust Company is the first downtown bank to build for its Back Bay office a complete new building.

The new Back Bay building represents one more forward step in the constantly expanding policy of this bank the oldest Trust Company in Boston. Fifty-eight years ago the bank, as the first of the Trust Companies in Boston, opened its offices with one room at 78 Devonshire st., moving later to 85 Devonshire st. The steadily increasing business soon made expansion necessary and early in the twentieth century it moved to its present location at 135 Devonshire st., where the continued demand for its services soon necessitated the adjoining building at 24 Milk st. and adding another story to its original building. The present structure comprises five floors at 135 Devonshire st as well as three complete floors at 24 Milk st. and the new building. Since moving into its present building in 1906, the trust fund it handles has increased by over $100,000,000. One of the most interesting features is that all of this growth has come from new business without consolidations. Another point of interest is that the original purpose of the bank—the nature of trusts and property — remains today the primary function of this bank.

Architecturally the new Back Bay branch building was designated to perpetuate the best New England traditions. The design finds its inspiration from some feature of the English Renaissance—about the period of Sir Christopher Wren. The building has exerted a strong influence upon the American architect, Charles Bulfinch, designer of many of Boston's foremost buildings

The New England Trust Co. has been built as a bank, with the most modern in every respect, completely equipped with the most convenient and comfortable facilities for the transaction of business.

The main banking room and safe deposit vaults with the most up-to-date safety appliances, are at street level. This is an unusual feature in bank construction and allows the customer to use the vaults without going up or down stairs. Below the safe deposit vaults is another temporary access to these possessions. A conference room on the main floor with the most convenient access on the mezzanine floor can be made available for meetings of directors of boards of business or charitable corporations.

Surrounding the main banking room and conveniently arranged with reference to it are the spaces for the bank officers, consultation rooms, working space for tellers, a men's alcove and a ladies room.

In mezzanine floor, directly above the safe deposit department and in an easily accessible and well-lighted location, is a large and comfortably furnished room for ladies, well appointed with desks telephone and other elements appropriate to the needs of women customers.

The safe deposit vaults are furnished with the latest devices for rendering them secure against fire, flood or burglary. Watchmen will be on duty every moment of the 24 hours Electric appliances in conjunction with the outside protection will, at the slightest irregularity be brought into instant activity Convenient and commodious rooms for the examination of box contents and clipping of coupons is provided

Both in its exterior and in error the building reflects a warmth and beauty of color and character. The Newbury st. facade of the building is of Connecticut white granite, in fine-grained, evenly laid, ashlar form and durable New England stone, of slightly pinkish tone, admirably adapted to the execution of clean-cut mouldings and sharp arrises and other delicate to other refinements of the stone-cutting art. It is the same stone that was used in the Commonwealth of the late police commissioner, Edwin U. Curtis, on the Charles River Esplanade at the foot of Clarendon st., but has very seldom, if ever, been used before in Boston as the facing of a public building.

The design of the front is a simple composition of three vigorous, rusticated arches surmounted by a second story of smooth ashlar with five large French windows opening upon a wrought-iron balcony.

The central archway is the main entrance of the bank, and the lateral doorways on the west gives access to the elevators and stairways for office floors above.

The main banking room walls are of full height Slavonic oak with large panels. The floor slabs are of unfading Vermont slate, with varying shades of green, black and purple Carved ornamentation reminiscent of the vigorous style of the famous English carver, Grinling Gibbons, is used most strategically At the easterly side of the main banking room is a cozy fireplace with a mantel of Pavia marble with insets of Greek green The iron work—gates and tellers windows and wrought screens—is of ewiskey, from whose plant at Roxbury comes many of the world's most famous steel and iron engraving. The design of this work, as well as that of the bronze entrance doors, is worthy of careful study The American elm, symbolic of the New England Trust Company, is used as a motif. From it has been anated a distinctive design of strength and beauty.

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, June 28.—Public opinion has been cool in the face of the current remaking of the banking system of the country.

Two decades ago, when banking was less concentrated, there were widespread fears of a "money trust," resulting in the so-called Pujo investigations of Congress, at which the great financial barons of Wall Street — including those who were personally known as silent men—were compelled to state their case.

The abundance of recent bank mergers is in fact only one phase of the larger trend of economic power into the hands of business units. The economies of large scale operations have appealed widely to bankers, to business and to the public. In order to perpetuate the favorable public attitude there is a large responsibility on the part of the managers of big business and high finance to use its power in such a way as to serve the interest of general social welfare.

Rudolph S. Hecht, president of the Hibernia Bank & Trust Company, New Orleans, and one of the outstanding men of finance in the South, who in his role of chairman of the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers' Association, has made a close study of banking tendencies, sees evidence of a changed popular opinion toward consolidations. In a report submitted to the American Bankers' Association he also pointed out that he believed that small bankers were less opposed than in the past to chain and branch banking. He recognized that the traditional American system of a multiplicity of small unit banks is now on trial.

The way to adequate functioning of the banking and financial system, Mr. Hecht said, is not through branch banking as such, but through better banking. "It is not so much a question of the system," he insisted, "as it is one of management that makes for the safety of the banks. No new laws, no matter how carefully devised, can be regarded as a substitute for sound policies of administration. The unit system is on trial and its vindication itself, it depends on the unit bankers themselves whether the system shall continue to live or be ultimately swept away by the rising tide of branch and chain banking."

As evidence of the increasing concentration of banking power, the official figures show that the total number of banks decreased from 30,812 in 1921 to 24,213 in 1928, while the resources of banks increased from $45,000,000,000 to $71,-000,000,000. At the very first the decline was ascribable, mainly to the failure and absorption of weak banks, but the process has now reached another phase in which mergers result from the joining of strong outstanding banks.

Hecht has compiled some original data showing the way the wind is blowing. The figures cover the banks in cities with a population of 300,000 or more. In half of these cities more than 75 per cent of the total deposits of their respective communities are held by three to five banks. Furthermore, of the 256 largest banks in these cities control $20,318,000,000 out of total deposits in these same localities of $26,827,000,000. Moreover, these same 256 largest banks control more than one-third of the total bank deposits throughout the nation.

In other words, fewer than one per cent of the total number of banks now hold more than one-third of the aggregate deposits in all banks throughout the United States, and the current trend is toward further concentration.

Bankers feel that the recent mergers constitute a recognition of a mandate from the public for better banking. However, Mr. Hecht contends that good banking is not a matter of size. "A properly conducted small country bank can be as safe as a large city institution with many branches. Success in the banking field depends on good management, whether the unit be large or small. It cannot be denied, of course, that larger institutions can and usually do employ more capable men and greater specialization and wider judgment than can the average small unit bank. They also have the benefit of larger facilities for standardizing their business, keeping themselves properly informed, and thus averting many losses resulting from actual operations as well as from poor credits.

"However, we have reached a point in our profession where most of the deficiencies of the small unit bankers can be supplied, not necessarily by making any fundamental changes in our banking system or by giving up any of our unit bankers' independence, but merely by bringing about a better spirit of co-operation and mutual helpfulness."

$52,618,711 IS ASSOCIATED GAS EARNINGS

Record gross earnings and other income of $52,618,711 are reported by the Associated Gas and Electric System in a consolidated statement of earnings and expenses of its properties since dates of acquisition, for the 12 months ended April 30, 1929. This compares with $40,900,262 in the corresponding 12 months of the preceding year, an increase of $11,718,449 or 29 per cent. These figures do not include any earnings from Rochester Gas and Electric properties acquired since the above date After deducting operating expenses, maintenance, all taxes, etc., net earnings remained of $23,818,-643 as against $18,161,598, an increase of $5,657,045 or 31 per cent.

The consolidated statement reveals considerable further progress in the management's policy of acquiring underlying securities of purchased properties principally through exchanges of Associated Gas and Electric Company Securities in a 17 per cent decrease in underlying preferred stocks and bond interest, which, for the 12 months ended April 30 last, required but $4,650,-643 as against $5,607,615 for a period of $911,663 from the $5,447,478 required for these purposes in the year ended April 30, 1928.

The balance remaining after deducting underlying preferred stock dividends and bond interest was $19,282,978, a gain of 52 per cent over the $12,-694,120 figure for the year ago. After deduction of all other interest the balance for dividends and depreciation totalled $13,106,486, comparing with $8,262,882, an increase of $2,842,604 or 34 per cent. The Associated System's depreciation account for the year ended April 30 last, including provisions by the companies themselves and retirement of fixed capital was 62 per cent greater than in the previous 12 months, amounting to $3,257,852 against $2,005,987, while balance for dividends and surplus at $7,848,634, for the 12 months ended April 30, 1929, represents a 25 per cent gain over this item for the 12 months ended April 30, 1928, when $6,257,795 was reported

STEEL MERGER MEETS WITH APPROVAL

Revival of rumors involving Republic Iron & Steel in a merger with other Midwest producers finds considerable acceptance. It is believed the Eaton and Mather groups of Cleveland are simply marking time before proceeding with further consolidation plans affecting Republic.

Already Trumbull Steel Co. and Steel & Tubes, Inc., have been absorbed by the Youngstown Independent. Controlling interests in Republic also control Otis Steel, Cleveland; Midland Steel Products, Cleveland; Central Alloy of Canton and Massillon; Berger Manufacturing Co. Canton, and a large shareholders in other primary steel companies such as Empire Steel Corp., Mansfield.

Consolidation of these various companies, now operating independently, is regarded as a matter of time. One of the principal objectives of Republic leadership, however, is believed to be establishment of a large steel unit in connection of importance in Chicago district. Within 12 months the Young group, headed by Cyrus S. Eaton, has purchased into Inland, whose stock, though, is closely held by the Block family.

It is in the Chicago district that Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. has made its greatest progress the past five years. By purchasing Steel & Tube Co. of America, Sheet & Tube gained control of Inland, this district which is proving of larger value each year. The large bulk of its current Associated System's capitalization and betterments, now running $1,500,000 per month, has been in the Chicago area.

Pierre S. du Pont, chairman of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., sailing on the S S Berengaria, bound for Cherbourg, Hilmers & Co. is doing an exceptionally good business and the year's earnings will show a substantial increase over 1928. VACATION FOR HERR FIRST IN YEARS

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Edward M. Herr, long-time president of Westinghouse Electric, whose career started as the result of advice given him by the then head master of the Boston Latin school, is planning his first real vacation in years. F. A. Merrick takes over the reins of the presidency, and Mr. Herr becomes vice chairman. Mr. Herr's inspiring success gives us the earliest concrete example of hosts of worthwhile vocational guidance activities now in our public schools, but no doubt there were others. The schoolmaster, partner in the limelight of this graduation season, has been a guide and friend to thousands of young men at the outset of their careers.

English high school as well as Boston Latin can come in for a little mention here. Albert H. Wiggin, former Boston banker, chairman of the great Chase National Bank of New York, is an English high "product." Although he attended no college, he is shortly to be honored with the degree of doctor of laws by Kenyon College.

Important in the financial news of the past 24 hours is the listing of the first investment trusts on the New York Stock Exchange. Investment trusts have a long history, dating back to early days of financial operations. They came into prominence with railroad successes in England and Scotland years ago, but have been comparatively recently transplanted in American soil. Here the big leaders have thrived beyond the records set abroad. Incidentally, a good many of the issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange are to many intents and purposes "investment trusts."

Headed by Daniel Willard, astute Vermonter, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad continues to show large increases in both gross and net earnings in comparison with a year ago and indications point to one of the very best years in this road's history. Renewed interest is being manifest in the stock since expiration of the rights and successful subscription of $41,000,000 new common offered to the stockholders by President Willard, by the way, has just been elected a director of Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York.

Telephone requirements in the United States during 1929 call for three times as much telephone wire in cable as in 1926. In 1926, telephone cables containing slightly more than four billion conductor feet of wire were manufactured to meet the demands of the telephone industry. In 1928, the amount had increased to 7,300,000,000, and for 1929 the estimates call for close to 12 billion conductor feet of wire in cables.

In 1926, 6000 telephone repeaters were manufactured, and the schedule for 1929 calls for 32,000. About half a million loading coils were made in 1926. The estimated figure for 1929 is 1,680,000. These figures give a graphic picture of the increased demand by the people of the United States for more and better telephone service.

Water Works Sets New Earnings Mark

American Water Works and Electric Company, Inc., reports consolidated gross earnings for the year ended May 31, 1929 of $493,007,417, a new high and greater by $2,406,601 than gross for the preceding twelve months.

Net income after all charges, including reserves, is also a new high at $6,947,668. This is equivalent after preferred dividend requirements to $3.82 a share on the 1,467,950 shares of common stock outstanding as of May 31, 1929. For the year ended May 31, 1928 net income was $4,915,319, equivalent to $2.69 a share, after similar charges, on the 1,395,436 shares of common stock then outstanding.

Brockway Motor to Sell More Shares

Directors of Brockway Motor Truck Corp. authorized sale of 25,000 common shares at $50 a share, proceeds to be used for corporate purposes. Directors will allocate 945 shares to each holder of record in issue to capital. Stockholders have no pre-emptive right with respect to the additional shares, which are in addition to outstanding 154,081 shares of common, exclusive of the additional offering.

Market Adaptability Big Factor in Speculation

By W. S. COUSINS

NEW YORK, June 28—Ability to adapt stock market activities to changing conditions in finance and industry and to the financial fortunes of industrial corporations in particular is without doubt the principal factor in successful stock market speculation.

With so many revolutionary developments in steel, copper, motor car and other industries coming to light each day, some of them to create fortunes for the fortunate groups, while others serve to wipe away the resources accumulated through years of toil and economy, it is imperative that speculators and investors in stocks and bonds keep abreast of these kaleidoscopic changes. In fact, the bulk of the successful professional traders find it necessary to keep a few jumps ahead of the market at all times.

A stock trader who argues that because he refused to buy $50 a share for stock last year, he will therefore reject the same stock at $75 this year is indulging in the poorest brand of logic. Many things can happen in a year, and the weakest of financial experts every day concede that a stock may double and quadruple in value in the space of one year, without considering that it may have sold under its real value at any time the list comprised a few.

Failure to recognize these fundamental principles has caused heavy losses to hundreds of small traders and virtually ruined many. Others with ample resources who have attempted to "play the market" with a wholly inadequate mental equipment. Stubbornness in persistently buying stocks that are falling, and the sold shop-worn "averaging up" theory has hastened the financial shipwreck of other hapless bulls to whom the resources of the Rothschilds would have been a mere pittance.

Successful speculators are unanimous in their declaration that stocks should be acquired, not on cheap and low price levels, but on the advances. The reason is that public trading by such a process rests upon a basis rather than upon the marginal account. Of course, this might not apply as readily to public manipulations, but in the engineering of the so-called shake-outs designed wholly to frighten timid traders out of their stocks and to force them to sell at any price.

Manipulation is an important factor in most market movements, but artificial prices cannot be permanently maintained by any clique or group, any more than the sea can be dammed up by a defective dyke. In the long run, net earnings will assert themselves as the basic fundamental factor in the up and down of corporation stock prices, and net income to investors is reflected by which all security prices will be measured.

Any of the prominent investment banking houses will testify they spend thousands of dollars a year in their quest of reliable information on which to base their appraisal of security values. Whether underwriting new issues from corporation treasuries or government officials; participating in advantageous pools; accumulating an outstanding issue of stocks or bonds to their clients, these investment houses must be absolutely sure of their grounds. They are unwilling to accept reports and information from unknown sources. Every step of the way must be thoroughly examined and tested by processes of which only a few have explicit confidence.

Many of the chart-readers in the financial district are not taken seriously, but the chart reflects some very important and very technical phases of speculative trading. The chart, for example, reveals just how much financial pressure on the part of stocks command at certain price levels, its ability to "break through" to new price ranges or its inability to "hold" at the lowest prices yet recorded. Breaking through to "new highs" indicates market strength, for the reason that stocks which acquire this commendable habit are supposedly selling the world they are worth more money.

Many traders who are chary about buying a stock at 46 will not hesitate to buy it at 47 or even 85, for the reason that their charts have told them most of the "floating" stock is for sale below 50. With this floating stock removed from the market, the stock is in a better position to advance. Thus saith the chart, but unfortunately, charts often go wrong.

ANACONDA IS REVIEWED BY BROKERS

"We believe that an entire reconsideration of Anaconda's investment position must be taken and that Anaconda must be considered essentially well bought at current levels for investment purposes," says a study of Anaconda by Hornblower & Weeks.

"Last spring, when inflation had come into the copper metal market, the financial community was filled with the glowing reports of prospects enjoyed by this company at the then prevailing prices. With the collapse of the metal market and the subsequent speculative liquidation, this company has suffered from a similar during of existing conditions.

"Because of the general disappointment, little heed has been paid to Anaconda's actual earning power, including importance and financial strength. Of course, as the only completely integrated company in the copper industry, Anaconda's prosperity depends on the outlook for the copper situation, which we believe likely to stabilized itself at current levels, and, with the resumption in fall of normal seasonal speculative buying, will maintain the market at or above this level.

DEMAND DIVERSIFIED

"The indicated demand for copper has never been so diversified and so intense. In the last several years, industries new in the building trades, automobiles and radios, have come into the copper metal market with a demand that could not have been estimated even five years ago; but, the most important factor in the situation is the amazing rate at which the electrification of this country is increasing. The electrification program adopted by big Eastern railroads we believe will be a forerunner to similar electrification plans in the country.

"The $2,000,000,000 expansion program on the part of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. places another important copper customer in the market with an unprecedented demand. The current strength in utility stocks and the electrical equipment stocks is a clear indication of these activities which may be expected in that direction.

"We cannot but agree with the current statement made in Moody's Weekly Review: 'The United States now is the most active phase of electrification in its history," which is borne out by the 35 per cent increase in orders received by electrical equipment manufacturers in the first quarter of 1929 over the first quarter, the mounting percentage by which each month the consumption of copper exceeds the consumption of the similar month the previous year. The importance of this factor cannot be overestimated and the unprecedented action on the part of the electrical stocks would tend to assure the copper metal market of a steady and increasing demand over the next five years.

STRENGTHENING

"With the copper situation strengthening investment consideration of Anaconda, the most important and only integrated unit in the industry, will focus on the list. Its present position should now lie ahead of the common stock which is thus entitled to the highest financial rating.

"Furthermore, with 18c copper, the company's earnings are sufficient to meet the most conservative estimates as above $12 a share and those well informed are inclined to the view that as high as $14, inasmuch as copper metal may very well average above 18c for the entire year and the company's industrial departments, which have been continually expanding, are currently having been enjoying record profits, irrespective of the copper metal situation. Therefore, the current $7 dividend rate just announced must be considered exceedingly safe and yielding 6 per cent, Anaconda is a decidedly attractive purchase.

"Furthermore, we would buy Anaconda Copper stock now that it enjoys the sole equity of this great industrial and mining enterprise and we feel that once the financial community recovers from the disappointment of speculative losses in the collapse in copper metal prices a more far-sighted evaluation of the wonderful metal situation and Anaconda's inherent worth will be made, and that those bought at current prices will prove decidedly attractive over the next few months."

Miami Copper Will Stay on $1 Basis

Directors of Miami Copper Co. are expected to declare the regular quarterly dividend of $1 at their meeting Friday. Assuming the price of 18 cents to hold for copper, Miami will earn $2,000,000 on the 720,000 shares in 1929 after depreciation, federal taxes, etc.

Miami's output will increase steadily in 1929. Starting at under 4,250,000 pounds a month, it is now over 5,000,000 and by the end of the year will be over 6,000,000 pounds a month, so that 1929 output will be over 60,000,000 pounds, or 90 pounds of copper a share produced this year.

E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd., Earns $515,495 in '28

E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd. (to be affiliated with Fleischmann Co. and Royal Baking Powder in a new company) reports to Stock Exchange for year ended December 31, 1928, net of $513,495 after expenses, taxes, etc., against $490,000 in 1927. There are outstanding 300,000 no-par shares of common.

AIRCRAFT CO. HAS ORDERS FOR $9,000,000

Airplane motor production of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Co., subsidiary of United Aircraft & Transport Corp., this month is at a record level and shipments should approximate 220 engines, as compared with about 500 in first quarter this year, 953 for the entire year 1928 and 209 in Jan. 1, 1928. Present indications are for 2000 engines this year.

Gross for first quarter of Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Corp. was $3,710,367, against $1,130,030, in first quarter of 1928. Net was $1,300,274, against $337,012 a year before. The former figure is equivalent to 73 cents a share on United Aircraft & Transport stock, after allowing for the three months' dividends on the entire issue of $15,000,000 of 6 per cent preferred. It is conservative to say, however, that earnings for company quarters of 1929 and 1928 should be substantially greater than for the first quarter.

Pratt & Whitney has orders on hand for more than $9,000,000 worth of business, including a substantial volume from the people of production of foreign plants manufacturing the Pratt & Whitney "Wasp" and "Hornet" motors is running at satisfactory rate.

The company is represented in Canada and the British Empire by Canadian Pratt & Whitney Co., a subsidiary, while Bavarian Motor Works, of Munich, Germany, manufacturers of the B. M. W. water-cooled engines, have exclusive manufacturing and sales rights to Pratt & Whitney engines. Sales agreements have been entered into with Okura & Co. for distribution of the company's engines in the Far East and Japan.

To prepare itself to handle increased business Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Co. recently purchased 600 acres in East Hartford, Ct., and plans a factory with 500,000 square feet of floor space. Present facilities comprise approximately 162,000 square feet of floor space. Work is expected to commence on the new factory within the next three months. It should be in production by next spring.

Northern Pacific Finds Crops Good

President Donnelly of Northern Pacific Railway reports crops in our territory is good. Wheat acreage is probably somewhat less than last year, but the prospects in our territory this year should compare well with 1928. As we have had heavy rains this month, moisture conditions are good. The letter just signed by President Hoover in regard to disposition of 2,800,000 acres held under land grant by Northern Pacific is favorable to the road, as the courts always contended ownership of this land must be determined by the courts. Under the law just passed the government will probably bring a condemnation suit to recover the land for its forest reserves in which the compensation to Northern Pacific for the acreage will be determined.

$5,000,000 IN GOLD BOUGHT IN LONDON

New York, June 28—The purchase of $5,000,000 in gold from the Bank of England for shipment to New York was announced by the Irving Trust Company. The metal will leave Great Britain on the steamship Ile de France. In all $6,804,584 worth of gold bars were taken from the Bank of England, of which 1,000,000 pounds represented the metal taken by the Irving Trust, and a like amount was engaged for shipment to Germany. The odd 804,564 pounds, equal to approximately $4,022,820, went to an unknown buyer, and may possibly be destined for shipment to this country.

The purchase brings the total of gold taken from England in the present movement to over $14,000,000, of which the major portion arrived during the last week. The stimulating gold movements started at the port of New York from June 20 to June 26, inclusive, released by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, showed a net gain to this market for the week of $17,616,000.

Imports for the week totalled $17,671,000, of which $9,485,000 came from Argentina, $8,050,000 from England and the remainder $131,000 chiefly from Latin-America. Exports consisted solely of a shipment of $58,000 to Mexico.

The purchase of gold in London came as somewhat of a surprise as it had been expected that the high rates for call money obtaining in this market would prohibit imports of the metal until after the first of July when money rates are normally lower. It had been pointed out by foreign exchange dealers that the funds tied up in effecting the transfer of the metal if employed in the call market at prevailing rates for the length of time necessary to ship gold across the Atlantic, would earn a greater return than could be secured at present on the London market.

Not all banks, however, base their calculations on the call money rate in figuring the level at which profitable imports of sterling can be made. Instead, a general figure representing the average rather than the money market is used. In the present case this figure would be between 7 and 8 per cent.

With a fast sailing immediately after the purchase, it is possible that the transfer will show a profit on a gold shipment at current levels for sterling at the rate just under 8 per cent per annum.

Substantial Gain in du Pont Net Seen

Pierre S. du Pont, chairman of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., and Lammot du Pont, president, stated: "E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. is doing an exceptionally good business and the year's earnings should show a substantial increase over 1928. Company's second quarter earnings should compare favorably with the preceding months." Mr. du Pont said he believed General Motors earnings were running along favorably and that the company should continue to show the same progress it has in the past.

CAPACITY OF TELEPHONE IS INCREASED

Research by laboratory experts of the Bell Telephone System has developed means of increasing the carrying capacity of telephone wires many times. Ordinarily a pair of wires is needed for one telephone communication. By means of carrier current systems these wires have been employed for superimposing additional facilities on existing open wires by the installation of suitable apparatus at terminals and intermediate points.

Six such systems are at present in use. The two systems at first introduced, while largely superseded by later ones, are still partially used. One type of these now used is largely used on long distance lines, while another is generally used for shorter distances.

By means of one system, known as the "C" type, three additional telephone circuits are added to a pair of aerial wires, making it possible for four telephone conversations and five telegraph messages to be sent over one pair of open wires at the same time.

By utilizing two pairs of open wires it is possible to hold three conversations, at regular voice frequency, by what is known as "phantoming," and three by means of the "carrier" system; also four direct current telegraph channels and ten additional ones made available by the carrier telegraph system on the second pair of wires, making in all 20 communication channels simultaneously on two pairs of open wires.

Another combination makes possible, by the use of the same pairs of wires, the transmission of two telephone messages and 24 telegraph messages simultaneously. Another combination brings one telephone and four telegraph channels together simultaneously.

The various messages are separated by using higher frequencies than is required to transmit the voice by ordinary circuit, so that there is no conflict between the various voice and telegraph communications.

At the end of 1928 there were in use 55 type "C" carrier systems with a channel mileage of 116,400 miles. The longest single circuit of this kind at present in use is between Chicago and Seattle, a distance of 2229 miles.

FORMS FOREIGN SUBSIDIARY

New York, June 28—The formation of a $1,000,000 holding corporation controlling the foreign operations of the Johns-Manville Corp., with the exception of branches in Canada, was announced today by W. R. Seigle, chairman of the board, at the company's office, 202 Madison ave. He explained that the company's business in Europe has been growing so steadily that it has reached a point where it is necessary to incorporate more companies in the foreign field.

The new holding company chartered in Delaware as the Johns-Manville International Corp., will hold the stock owned by the home company in branches operating in Europe and South America. Some of the foreign companies in which stock is owned outright and others in part.

Within the last 30 days, Mr. Seigle says, a new branch company has been organized in Germany under the name of the Asbest und Celite Gesellschaft, M. B. H., with headquarters in Berlin. The stock in this company is held outright by the new holding company. Other foreign branches are located in England, France and Belgium. The Belgian company, with a capitalization of $520,000, was purchased last February. Branches are located also in Brazil and other South American countries.

Big Surplus Seen

Washington, June 28—A treasury surplus of approximately $170,000,000 at the close of this fiscal year, June 30, 1929, was predicted by Secretary Mellon.

Boston Wool Men Send Appeal to U. S. Senate

PRESIDENT EDWARD MOIR and Secretary Joseph W. Randall of the Carded Woolen Manufacturers' Association of Boston address the following letter to the U. S. Senate committee on finance:

"On behalf of the Carded Wool Manufacturers' Association we desire to call your committee's attention to the brief which was presented by the association in 1921 and to which you have access, and for the convenience of your committee we are enclosing copies of our brief pertaining to the wool and means committee on February 6 of this year. We have nothing we desire to take from these briefs.

"In 1828 a similar condition existed in Congress as now and the Hon. Daniel Webster made a speech on the proposition at that time and pointed out that in 1824 the duty on wool was 30 per cent ad valorem costing 10 cents per pound and over, and a duty of 15 per cent on wool under that price. The bill of 1828 proposed a specific duty of 4 cents per pound plus the ad valorem duty of 30 per cent on all wool of every description, and stated that the result of the combination of these two duties would be that wool costing 30 to 40 cents per pound would pay a duty equal to 60 per cent and wool costing for less than 10 cents per pound in the foreign market would pay a duty on the average of 100 per cent ad valorem.

"We further think it is pertinent to point out that the Constitution of the United States, while it does not mention it, undoubtedly is susceptible of the construction that all duties laid by Congress on imports should be uniform as between the several states. Duties on wool with another using a different quality of wool. It seems to us to be a monstrous proposition that one user's raw material should be taxed 150 per cent and another user's raw material only 20 per cent.

• • •

"We might call the committee's attention to speeches by Hon. James W. Wadsworth, then a Senate member, and by Hon. Edward Smoot, in condemnation of the proposed Fordney bill; also a speech by Hon. Allen Treadway in the House, wherein Mr. Treadway pointed out the unfairness of a proposal of 25 per cent without a limiting clause, the duty on wool would vary from 25 to 100 per cent. This has been verified by statistics of the customs department as from 1825 to 1830 and during the years when wool was the basis of the tariff bill passed by the House recently, we might say that it made available to the favored certain manufacturers on certain wools that they used.

"After an experience of four or five years of the tariff bill of 1867, which was framed during and in the ways and means committee by the carded wool manufacturers of that day and signed on their behalf by Edward Harris of Woonsocket, one of the pioneers in fine goods manufacture of the United States and 27 or practically all of the carded wool manufacturers in existence at that time. This petition showed it was utterly impossible for the carded woolen manufacturer to manufacture under that bill due to the fact that most of the wool imported by them was fine wool of heavy shrinkage. Wools suitable for the present system of combing were not grown at that time excepting in the British Isles and Canada. These wools were not suited for the machinery used by the carded manufacturers but went into the manufacture of linings and similar fabrics with a compensatory duty based on four pounds of wool to make one pound of cloth, they were over-compensated in some cases more than 400 per cent. In that way the worsted business became very profitable.

"No attention was paid to this memorial other than to reduce the duty a little which made no difference really in the bill.

"On the proposed bill we are going to have a repetition of a similar kind of duties varying from 44s and below are to have the benefit of 70 per cent clean pound over rent and 44s wool costing

CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Don't Worry About N. E. Industry

President Ernest M. Hopkins, of Dartmouth, worries because so many graduates of New England colleges are seeking their life work outside New England. At Hanover, he issues the following statement:

"I think that New England does not keep the proportion of its college men that it might well keep if the advantages of industrial opportunities in New England were made clear to them, but New England industries, as a whole, are neither offering opportunities for learning a business, nor are they offering opportunities for salaries equal to those offered by concerns outside New England."

The New England Council has concerned itself with this same problem and President Hopkins' statement is in line with the Council's activities to acquaint college graduates with the opportunities in this district. He takes our industrialists to task for failure to offer salaries or opportunities of learning a business equal to those offered outside New England and this seems a bit beside the point, but he may be answered.

New England industry is sound, healthy and prospering. A man worth $5000 or $25,000 or $50,000 will receive his worth in New England industry as quickly as in the West or in the South. And where in New England is the opportunity denied the graduate who wishes to learn a particular business?

John S. Lawrence, treasurer of the New England Council, seems to sum up the problem of the college graduate in his address before the national realtors, convened in Boston. He says:

"In addition to the drift of cotton manufactures to the South and the trend of shoe manufactures to the West, there are everywhere prevailing tendencies toward geographical decentralization of production. Today we find that the tide of economic development has changed definitely towards a diversification of activities within our communities."

Even our college graduates are being decentralized. Some New England college men will leave this section for life work in other fields just as some once exclusively New England industries have gone afar. But some graduates of colleges outside New England may be expected to come here just as industries once foreign to New England are coming within our fold.

It is decentralization of the trained college man which naturally follows decentralization of industry. It is nothing to occasion alarm.

And Dr. Malcolm Kier, Dartmouth professor of economics, who also addresses the realtors, supports Mr. Lawrence's faith with the statement: "There is ample evidence that New England is not only the ancestor of industry but a very active member of the family today."

We are not decadent. We are not infirm. The answer to all inquiries should be: The state of New England's industrial health is excellent. Don't worry too much about it, because worry conceivably may affect industry even as it affects the individual.

Why Pick on Spiritualists?

They Do Their Best

(Copyright, 1929)

Conan Doyle thinks the police should stop bothering spiritualistic mediums and any law that interferes with their "seances" should be abolished. There are 500 "Spiritist" churches in England, with an attendance of 100,000. Their growth is due to deaths in wartime, and the desire of fathers and mothers for news of their sons.

Just why mediums should be made criminals and Spiritualists selected as the one religious sect excluded from the constitutioinal guarantees of religious liberty is a puzzle.

In every other religion the clergy are allowed to tell you what is going on in the other world, what happens when you get there. And they are allowed to take up collections, which is right.

Clergymen, often contradicting each other, cannot all be right. If some of them are allowed to be wrong, why not Spiritualists? In their way they give their followers what the followers want. And that is the blessing of all religion—it answers, satisfactorily, questions that really cannot be answered.

Learning Self-Reliance

It Must Begin Young

(Copyright, 1929)

A New York father sent two daughters to travel, alone, in Europe. He said he wanted them to learn to be "self-reliant, courageous and fearless."

One of the daughters was killed in an automobile accident last week in Austria.

Previously this daughter, driving an automobile near Ravenna, in Italy, struck and killed an Italian, seventy years old, riding a bicycle.

Investigation showed that the daughter was not at all to blame, the man killed having ridden his bicycle from behind a wagon against the car.

Another Noble Experiment

By NELSON HARDING

In this experimental age,
We should not fly into a rage
At every new experiment.
But try, at least, to be content.

The sawed-off shotgun that could store
Such execution in its roar,
Must now rest idly in its rack,
While gentler automatics crack. —N. H.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

THOSE mid-Victorian cynics, who scoffed at the idea of love-in-a-cottage, should have tried love in a kitchenette apartment!

Lots of these modern divorces and martial miseries can be traced to the flatness of life in a city flat. And that in spite of all the modern improvements and conveniences, which should make life one long, sweet dream, and eliminate all the old, standardized causes of dissension.

No arguments as to who shall go out and lock the garage or who shall bring in the logs for the fireplace, or who shall put out the cat, or bring the swing in out of the rain, or trot up and see if the attic windows are closed.

No discussions about when to mow the lawn or how soon to plant the nasturtiums, or when to order the coal, or to paint the piazza, or to clip the honeysuckle, or whether to invite mother for the summer!

Nothing to do but press a button, or ring up the janitor, or postcard the landlord. Nothing to get on your nerves, except stumbling over each other's shoes at night, and trying to dodge each others' knees in the "dinette" at breakfast.

But, that's just what makes flat-life so FLAT! There is something so impersonal and "companionate" about an apartment. You are attached to it, but you are not wedded to it. It doesn't "belong" to you. It isn't a "home"—it's just a temporary parking place.

A rented apartment is like a trial marriage. You don't care much what happens to it. You always feel that you can get OUT of it! What does a man care how he spots up the woodwork or burns holes in the parquet floors. He may not be there another year, anyway. What does a woman care whether the curtains match the walls or not, or how the furniture suits the rooms?

And when two people start out with a pre-nuptial agreement to separate the first time one of them feels bored, where is the incentive to make a beautiful thing of their marriage, to stick to it, and build a life together? You don't plant a garden around an apartment.

Whether a marriage lasts a minute, a day, a year, or forever, it should start out with the fixed idea of PERMANENCY. Otherwise, there is no meaning to it; no kick, no tang and no incentive in it. To go into marriage with the idea that it may not last, is to take your divorce decree with you to the altar! You are merely RENTING yourselves to each other—and you're sure to break the lease!

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

The conference between Charley Dawes and Premier MacDonald resulted in a draw.

It was an informal meeting in the premier's house. Charley made the premier feel right at home.

The premier started by asking "What kind of tobacco do you smoke?"

Charley asked, "What kind have you got?"

In diplomatic circles, this was a check-mate. Downs controlled the proxies but the debentures had collapsed.

The premier then remarked, "I get some good old American tobacco here."

Charley said, "I wish they had it in America."

Wishing to change the subject without altering climatic conditions, the premier interrogated, "What position did you hold in America?"

Charley explained, "I was next to the president."

The premier continued, "That was a splendid job."

Charley said, "It was, until the president got next to me."

Charley asked, "What have you there?"

The premier told him, "Tobacco."

Charley complained bitterly. "Why do you fool a guy by carrying it there?"

The premier asked, "Are you the man who said what America needed most was a good, fine cent cigar?"

"Sure. But I'm sorry I said it."

"Why?"

"Somebody gave me one."

The boys then went into their blindfold test and smoked 16 cartons of handpicked Sumatra crumbs.

At the finish of the executive pipe-smoking, merry old England was further in debt to the New World to the extent of three borrowed matches.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

RITA HOOD'S a fine girl—bright, pretty, generous—but few people like her. They say she's affected—always trying to be something she isn't.

That's true. Rita's different every time you meet her. Always acting some new role—always using some new mannerism or "line" which she has seen or heard. Of course, you know the motive—and it's rather pitiful. A hunger for popularity. But the result isn't happy. She's as unsure of herself as you are of her. She never rings true and she knows it. As a consequence she's as uneasy as she makes everyone else. A pity! For she's fine enough to win scores of friends if she'd only be herself. BE YOURSELF!

That's the soundest bit of advice any human being can have.

You, yourself, just as you stand, hold within yourself the makings of your own happiness and success. You may not be a great beauty or a great genius, but you can be YOU. And that, in itself, is a great achievement, for in all the world there is no one else exactly like YOU.

The elements of your nature may be simple, but they are DIFFERENT. And out of them you can construct the priceless treasure of personality if you will only BE YOURSELF honestly, courageously, sensibly and amiably.

Stop trying to be a clever imitation of Raquel Torres or H. L. Mencken or George Bernard Shaw or Helen Wills or Gene Tunney or the lady who's head of your P. T. A. or the man who's president of your boosters' club.

BE YOURSELF—even in the smallest concerns of your life. Let everything you do bear the stamp of your impulse and attitude. Don't strain yourself to be different. Let life proceed through you naturally—taking the imprint of your own spirit.

BE YOURSELF! BE REAL! THE REAL ARTICLE IS WORTH A THOUSAND SYNTHETIC IMITATIONS.

The Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

TONIGHT I have been back again
In ways of long ago.
With memories, sweet as April rain,
Of friends I used to know.

Within the mist of years I sought
Dear shapes long hidden there;
Old friends of youth, who in my thought
Still linger young and fair.

Loved friends of youth, borne far away
By time and change, whose tides
With ceaseless sweep of wave and spray
Leave nothing that abides.

How good it was to find secure,
Untouched within the past,
Old friends, whose beauties will endure
While life itself will last!

Can it be true I dwell for them
Amid enchantments rare,
Still crowned with youth's bright diadem,
In memory, fresh and fair?

One Press Not Bought

Benjamin Franklin Used It

A PRESS THAT FRANKLIN USED.

The American Printer published this photograph of an old press; the photograph was taken by George Brayton, of Boston.

It is different from presses now in use. Every time you printed one page of a newspaper you had to press down the handle—once for each side of each page.

It would have taken a long time to get out the circulation of such a newspaper as this with such machinery.

In 1722, 207 years ago, Benjamin Franklin as a boy apprenticed to his brother James, worked and learned his trade as a printer on this press.

Later he signed the Declaration of Independence, and the treaty of peace with England. He stands out easily and clearly as one of our four greatest men—Lincoln, Washington, Jefferson and FRANKLIN.

Mentally, Franklin was probably greatest of them all.

It is a comfort to reflect that this press, very simple, slow and primitive, was at least NOT OWNED BY THE POWER TRUST. No gentleman ever went to Benjamin Franklin's brother from a big Power Trust to suggest: "Let us lend you a little money, sell us an interest in your plant, we are friends of the American people and all we want is to have many newspapers often saying so."

This old press was a free press.

And, luckily, many modern presses that can print in an hour more than this press could print in a year are also free.

And, fortunately for the American people, the newspapers that the Power Trust can buy are, in the long run, not WORTH buying.

The kind of editor that will do the dirty work of a Power Trust is the kind of editor that, sooner or later, probably SOONER, will lose his readers.

The people are not fools. Strange as it may seem to the Power Trust, the average reader knows SINCERITY and recognizes it in the written word.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, June 28—Thoughts while strolling: Moon-faced men who part their hair in the middle. Glenn Hunter, dean of the adolescent actors. Haughty French cafes that make you long for a mess of greens, turnip tops and wild mustard. The fellow who invented paper milk bottles.

Slow-gaited window shoppers who talk like characters in a Sinclair Lewis novel. Sign: "Just a good old place to eat." John Golden's fancy golf togs. The uniformed scissors grinder and his motor car. Self-conscious ladies promenading in riding habits. Paul Block.

The new taxis with the black shirted drivers. Bus top kiddies. Hatless boys with swishing walks. Whoops! The venerable Second ave. doctors who still drive around in horse-drawn buggies. One of the old Hatfield feudists now a night watchman. Remember Devil Anse? Pierre V. R. Key, the music critic.

What became of the juggling vaudeville crow? Isaac F. Marcosson, a Louisville, Ky., boy who made good in the city. And whose shirts and ties suggest an aurora borealis gone wrong. The hotel that boasts of a crystal lined bathtub. Cab drivers with faces like blurred cabbages.

Those gay elevated newsstand displays. Bright jacketed magazines. Racing tip posters. Green and pink extras. Clarence Budington Kelland. Known to the literati as "Bud." President of the Dutch Treat Club. And the most prolific of magazine scribblers. Sulka's, the swank haberdashery where all employes begin as package boys.

The bright flower boxes in Helen Gould's windows. And just a half dozen old avenue homes with dignity, but no ostentation. Will Hays leaving the Ritz Tower, where he lives. Never see anybody in New York "just puttering around." The new color in men's shirts—eggshell mauve. Well, I'll be doggedl'

Central Park is becoming dangerous for peaceful wayfarers. Hoodlums set upon old men, yank their beards, stone them and have held up, beaten and robbed young boys and girls. Old ladies, nurses and dogs have also been attacked.

For some time, too, Upper Central Park West, beyond 80th, has been particularly lawless. Young apaches have been rocking pedestrians and automobiles from the rocky cliffs of the park. Many families are seeking to break their leases to get away from the neighborhood. When a New Yorker gets bumped, he has no equal in the world.

And Columbus Circle has lost many of its familiar soap box orators. For years the police permitted malcontents to blow off steam there. It was a free nightly show but when subway excavations began two years ago the hot gospelers scattered. It is ship shape again but the orators have not returned.

One of the male salamanders discovers that soft soaping ladies about their weight is unfailing in inciting free dinner. He always greets them with: "You have grown shockingly thin!" Those who have ballooned a few kilos never forget him at dinner parties. They like a fellow like that around.

A man unknown to the headwaiter in a Park avenue restaurant has lunched there every week day for seven years and never bestowed a tip. Here's my nickel toward a monument.
